REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Petitioner Richard Duell, a New York State prison inmate as a result of his plea of guilty to four counts of sodomy, has commenced this proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254 seeking federal habeas intervention. Although making mention of claims that his conviction and sentence resulted from due process violations and the denial of equal protection as guaranteed under the Fourteenth Amendment, Duell's petition, as amended, focuses on his trial counsel's failure to file a timely notice seeking appellate review of his conviction and his corresponding claim that, as a result, he was denied the effective assistance of counsel.¹

During the course of an initial review of the matter the court identified a potential statute of limitations issue based upon the chronology of events outlined in Duell's petition and, after considering the question, ordered dismissal of the petition as time-barred, though affording Duell leave to amend in order to establish that the proceeding was timely commenced. Duell has since submitted an amended petition, and respondent has now appeared in the action, urging the court to dismiss Duell's amended petition as untimely.

¹ Petitioner does not elaborate in his papers as to the grounds for reversal that he would have raised in such a direct appeal.

Having carefully reviewed the record now before the court and concluded that the petition in this case is grossly untimely and that petitioner has presented no facts warranting the court's exercise of discretion to overlook its lateness, I recommend that the amended petition be dismissed.

I. BACKGROUND

On June 13, 2002, the petitioner entered a guilty plea in Madison County before County Court Judge Biagio J. Di Stefano admitting to four counts of sodomy, involving four separate minor female victims ranging in age between eight and fifteen years old. State Court Records (Dkt. No. 9) Exh. A. The plea was entered pursuant to an agreement providing that in return for Duell's guilty plea, the prosecution would recommend that the court impose certain specified prison terms on each of the four counts, including a determinate sentence of between twenty and twenty-five years on the first two counts of the indictment, with an additional period of five years of post-release supervision. Id. As part of the agreement, petitioner committed to waive his right to appeal both the conviction and any sentence imposed. Id.

Petitioner was scheduled to be sentenced by Judge Di Stefano in connection with his plea on August 12, 2002. State Court Records (Dkt. No. 9) Exh. B. After hearing from two of the victim's parents and the petitioner and his counsel, and reviewing letters submitted in connection with the charges against him, the court sentenced Duell to concurrent determinate terms of imprisonment of twenty-five years on each of the first degree sodomy counts, as well as indeterminate terms of imprisonment of between two and one-third and seven years for the second degree sodomy count, and from one and one-third to four years in connection with the third sodomy count, with an additional period of five years of supervision to follow his release from prison. Id. At the time of sentencing the court did not hear from Dr. Damian Vallelonga, Ph.D., a consultant retained by petitioner's counsel at Duell's direction to provide an assessment of petitioner's psychological condition for consideration at sentencing.²

On several occasions following his sentencing petitioner requested that his counsel file a notice of appeal on his behalf. Amended Petition

² The failure of petitioner's counsel to present a report from Dr. Vallelonga in anticipation of sentencing, together with his counsel's inability to preclude the trial court's consideration of letters submitted by Duell's daughters urging the imposition of a severe sentence, appear to be two major focal points of petitioner's ineffective assistance claim.

(Dkt. No. 3) ¶¶ 6-7. Petitioner signed a notice of appeal form prepared by his counsel and mailed it back to the attorney on September 5, 2002. Id. ¶ 7; see also Petition (Dkt. No. 1) Exh. C. In turn, petitioner's counsel forwarded the notice of appeal by mail to the Madison County Clerk's office and the New York State Supreme Court Appellate Division, Third Judicial Department, on September 11, 2002. Amended Petition (Dkt. No. 3) ¶ 8; Petition (Dkt. No. 1) Exh. D. By letter dated September 18, 2002, the Third Department notified petitioner's counsel that the notice of appeal was untimely and advised petitioner of his option "to make an immediate motion pursuant to [New York Criminal Procedure Law § 460.30] seeking an extension of time to timely file [his notice of appeal]." Amended Petition (Dkt. No. 3) ¶ 10; Petition (Dkt. No. 1) Exh. F.

On May 11, 2004, more than one and one-half years after having been advised by the Appellate Division to make an "immediate" motion for leave to file an untimely appeal, petitioner submitted such an application pro se. State Court Records (Dkt. No. 9) Exh. C. That motion was denied as untimely by the Third Department on July 8, 2004. State Court Records (Dkt. No. 9) Exh. E. Petitioner's application for leave to appeal that determination to the New York Court of Appeals was dismissed on August 30, 2004. Id. Exh. G.

On December 15, 2006, the petitioner, by this time represented by new counsel, submitted an application to set aside his sentence pursuant to New York Criminal Procedure Law § 440.20, arguing that he received ineffective assistance of counsel at the time of his sentencing. State Court Records (Dkt. No. 9) Exh. H. By decision issued on April 6, 2007, the trial court denied petitioner's application, finding that he had "failed to set forth grounds why the sentence 'was unauthorized, illegally imposed or otherwise invalid as a matter of law'". Id. Exh. K. Leave to appeal that unfavorable determination to the Third Department was denied by that court on June 11, 2007. Id. Exh. M.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner commenced this proceeding on December 19, 2007. Dkt. No. 1. Upon filing, Duell's petition was forwarded to the court for initial review, resulting in District Judge David N. Hurd's issuance, on January 31, 2008, of an order finding that the petition was untimely and subject to dismissal on its face. Dkt. No. 2. In his order, Judge Hurd therefore directed that the petition be dismissed, but granted Duell leave to file an amended petition within thirty days establishing that the proceeding was timely commenced.

On February 22, 2008, Duell submitted an amended petition that was approved for filing by order issued by Judge Hurd on March 19, 2008. Dkt. Nos. 3, 4. In that second order Judge Hurd once again alerted petitioner to the potential statute of limitations issue, but advised that before ruling on the question the court desired to have the benefit of a response to the petition. Id.

Appropriately named as the respondent in both Duell's initial petition and his amended petition is James T. Conway, the superintendent of the correctional facility in which Duell is being held by the New York State Department of Correctional Services. On July 30, 2008, Superintendent Conway, represented by the New York State Attorney General, responded to Duell's petition, submitting an answer and memorandum of law, accompanied by a compilation of the relevant state court records.³ Dkt. Nos. 8, 9. Petitioner has since countered with the filing of a reply, or "traverse", on August 12, 2008. Dkt. No. 10.

Duell's petition, which is now fully briefed and ripe for determination, has been referred to me for the issuance of a report and recommendation, ³ The court appreciates that the state court records submitted were logically compiled and helpfully indexed.

III. DISCUSSION

A. Statute of Limitations

In 1996 Congress enacted the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (“AEDPA”), Pub. L. No. 104-132, 110 Stat. 1214 (1996), bringing about sweeping reform of the prison inmate litigation landscape. The measures introduced by the AEDPA included significant new restrictions on the power of the federal courts to grant habeas relief to state court prisoners under 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Among them was the creation of a one-year limitations period for the filing of such habeas petitions. 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1); Cook v. New York State Div. of Parole, 321 F.3d 274, 279-80 (2d Cir. 2003). The AEDPA statute of limitations “reduces the potential for delay on the road to finality by restricting the time that a prospective federal habeas petitioner has in which to seek federal habeas review.” Duncan v. Walker, 533 U.S. 167, 179, 121 S.Ct. 2120, 2128 (2001).

The provision establishing the one-year limitation offers specific guidance regarding measurement of the prescribed period, providing that shall run from the latest of –

(A) the date on which the judgment became final by the conclusion of direct review or the expiration of the time for seeking such review;

(B) the date on which the impediment to filing an application created by State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, if the applicant was prevented from filing by such State action;

(C) the date on which the constitutional right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if the right has been newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review; or

(D) the date on which the factual predicate of the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.

28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1).

Petitioner argues that in his case the statute of limitations never began to run because “the procedural catalyst that triggered appellate review never actually transpired. . .” Amended Petition (Dkt. No. 3) ¶ 16. Petitioner’s argument in this regard finds no support in the law. It is well established that where, as here, no notice of appeal was filed, a state court conviction becomes final for AEDPA statute of limitations purposes, and the time for filing a petition seeking habeas review under 28 U.S.C. § 2254 begins to run, upon expiration of the time for seeking direct appellate review in the state courts. 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1)(A); see Bethea v. Girdich, 293 F.3d 577, 578 (2d Cir. 2002). Accordingly, even affording petitioner the benefit of the “prison mailbox rule” and deeming this proceeding as having been commenced on December 6, 2007, the date of the petition and when it presumably was conveyed to prison officials, see Noble v. Kelly, 246 F.3d 93, 97-98 (2d Cir.) (extending prison mailbox rule to habeas petitions under section 2254), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 886, 122 S.Ct. 197 (2001), the petition is grossly untimely, the one-year statute of limitations having expired on September 11, 2003.

Before turning to the question of tolling, the court must consider whether petitioner can claim the benefit of 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1)(B), which recognizes a later accrual date when state action has impeded a petitioner’s efforts to file a habeas petition. In this instance, however, petitioner has failed to allege the existence of any state action that precluded or delayed his filing of this proceeding. Petitioner’s effort to secure the benefit of this section is premised upon the potential delay of prison officials in returning the signed notice of appeal to his counsel.⁴

While that action may well have served as an impediment to petitioner's filing of a timely state court appeal, it does not present the situation envisioned by section 2244(d)(1)(B).⁵

B. Tolling

Before recommending the outright dismissal of Duell's petition as untimely, however, I must consider whether there is any basis for tolling the statute of limitations during all or some of the intervening period between the time that his conviction became final and the filing of his petition. Recognized grounds for tolling the limitations period include a petitioner's filing of a proper application for post conviction relief or collateral review, the principle of equitable tolling, and tolling based upon a claim of actual innocence.

1. State Court Post-Conviction Or Other Collateral Review Proceedings

Under the AEDPA the one-year governing limitations period is tolled during the pendency of a properly filed application for state post-conviction or other collateral review. 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(2); see Cowart v. Goord, No. 97 Civ. 3864(SS), 1998 WL 65985, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 18, 1998).⁶ This tolling provision balances the interests served by the exhaustion requirement and the limitation period. Section 2244(d)(2) promotes the exhaustion of state remedies by protecting a state prisoner's ability later to apply for federal habeas relief while state remedies are being pursued. At the same time, the provision limits the harm to the interest in finality by according tolling effect only to "properly filed application[s] for State post-conviction or other collateral review."

It should be noted that this savings provision only operates to toll the statute of limitations during the pendency of a properly filed state court proceeding. See Smith v. McGinnis, 208 F.3d 13, 17 (2d Cir. 2000); see also Bethea, 293 F.3d at 578. When such a review proceeding is filed, the provision stops, but does not reset, the clock from ticking on the time in which to file a habeas petition. It cannot revive a time period that has already expired. To allow a belated state court collateral attack to revive the AEDPA limitations period would defeat the purpose of the AEDPA limit.

Sorce v. Artuz, 73 F. Supp.2d 292, 294 (E.D.N.Y. 1999).

In this instance, there were two state court proceedings upon which petitioner could attempt to rely in seeking tolling of the limitation period. The first was his section 440.20 application, one which clearly could provide for tolling under section 2244(d)(2). See Cowart, 1998 WL 65985, at *2. That proceeding, however, was not filed until December 15, 2006, long after expiration of the controlling limitation period, and petitioner thus cannot look to that proceeding for solace.

The second relevant state court proceeding concerns petitioner's application for filing a late notice of appeal. Such a motion, however, is not the sort of state court application that tolls the one-year limitation period. Bethea, 293 F.3d at 578-79. In any event, once again, that application was not filed until May 11, 2004, well after expiration of the governing limitation period. See Brooks v. Artuz, 98 Civ. 4449, 1999 WL 138926, at * 2 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 15, 1999) (although filing a motion for a delayed appeal may toll the running of a pending, unexpired, one-year limitation period, it will not 'revive' the statute, or cause it to begin running a new.").

As can be seen, in this case petitioner cannot claim the benefit of tolling under section 2244(d)(2).

2. Equitable Tolling

Another recognized exception warranting a court's consideration of the merits of an otherwise untimely petition is the principle of equitable tolling. "In 'rare and exceptional circumstances' a petitioner may invoke the court's power to equitably toll the limitations period" imposed under the AEDPA. Doe v. Menefee, 391 F.3d 147, 159 (2d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 961, 126 S.Ct. 489 (2005) (citing Smith, 208 F.3d at 17; Corrigan v. Barbary, 271 F. Supp.2d 325, 330 (W.D.N.Y. 2005) (citing Smith)).

Under this narrow exception, the AEDPA statute of limitations may properly be equitably tolled where a petitioner has pursued his or her rights diligently, but has been prevented by "extraordinary circumstances" from filing a petition. Pace v. DiGuglielmo, 544 U.S. 408, 418, 125 S.Ct. 1807, 1814 (2005) (citation omitted); see also Menefee, 391 F.3d at 154.

“To merit application of equitable tolling, the petitioner must demonstrate that he [or she] acted with reasonable diligence during the period he [or she] wishes to have tolled, but that despite his [or her] efforts, extraordinary circumstances beyond his [or her] control prevented successful filing during that time.” Smaldone v. Senkowski, 273 F.3d 133 (2d Cir. 2001) (internal quotation and citation omitted), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1017, 122 S.Ct. 1606 (2002); see also Warren, 219 F.3d at 113 (citing Smith); West v. Hamill, No. 04-CV-2393, 2005 WL 1861735, at *1 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 1, 2005) (citing Smith).

Equitable tolling does not appear to apply in this case, and petitioner has offered no facts to suggest otherwise. Once again, while petitioner may have been misinformed by his counsel regarding his appeal rights, as he contends, and may have missed the deadline for filing the notice of appeal as a result of receiving poor advice, or ineffective assistance from his attorney, he does not allege that he was precluded from commencing this proceeding as a result of unforeseen or unusual circumstances.

Accordingly, I find no basis to recommend that equitable tolling be invoked in order to override the application of the statute of limitations in this case. Smaldone, 273 F.3d at 138-39 (citing cases and noting that attorney error and/or negligence is not a valid basis for equitable tolling); see also, West, 2005 WL 1861735, at *2.

C. Actual Innocence

A potentially available exception to the one-year statute of limitations involves claims of actual innocence. The Second Circuit has not yet staked out a formal position regarding whether the United States Constitution requires that an “actual innocence” exception be engrafted into the AEDPA’s statute of limitations. See Whitley v. Senkowski, 317 F.3d 223, 225 (2d Cir. 2003); Warren v. Artus, Nos. 9:05 CV 1032, 2007 WL 1017112, at *9 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2007) (Kahn, D.J. & Peebles, M.J.). That court has nonetheless directed that district courts consider a claim of actual innocence before dismissing a habeas petition as untimely. Id.; see also, Menefee, 391 F.3d at 161.

A showing of actual innocence requires more than merely arguing that the jury’s finding of guilt is against the weight of the evidence; to establish actual innocence, a petitioner must present “new reliable evidence that was not presented at trial and show that it is more likely than not that no reasonable juror would have found him [or her] guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Whitley, 317 F.3d at 2257; see also Medina

v. McGinnis, No. 04 Civ 26, 2004 WL 2088578, *27 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 20, 2004).

Here, petitioner has offered no proof that was not available to him at the time of his plea to support a claim of actual innocence. During his plea petitioner allocuted to having committed the offenses charged and therefore is hardly well-positioned to now claim actual innocence of the crimes of which he was convicted. Accordingly, even assuming that a credible claim of actual innocence could be deemed as sufficient to toll the statute of limitations, I conclude that such an exception does not apply in this case.

D. Certificate of Appealability

In order for a petitioner to appeal a final order denying habeas relief by a state prisoner, he or she must receive a certificate of appealability (“COA”). 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(1)(A); see also Fed. R. App. P. 22(b) (“unless a circuit justice or a circuit or district judge issues a certificate of appealability under 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)”, an appeal may not be taken from the denial of a habeas petition under section 2254). A COA may only issue “if the applicant has made a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right.” 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2).

In a case such as this, where dismissal of a petition is based on a procedural ground, a petitioner is eligible for a COA upon a showing “that jurists of reason would find it debatable whether the petition states a valid claim of the denial of a constitutional right, and that jurists of reason would find it debatable whether the district court was correct in its procedural ruling.” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484, 120 S.Ct. 1595,1604 (2000); see also, Bethea v. Girdich, 293 F.3d 577, 577-78 (2d Cir. 2002). As can be seen, this standard is comprised of two components, one of which is directed to the constitutional claims set forth in the petition, while the other focuses upon the basis for the court’s procedural holding. Id.

In this case, Duell’s petition plainly establishes a prima facie case of ineffective assistance of counsel. According to the petitioner, his counsel was directed to file a notice of appeal of his conviction, but failed to do so in a timely manner, resulting in rejection of the notice of appeal. While the fate of any such appeal is uncertain considering petitioner’s waiver of his right to appeal from the conviction and sentence, and not knowing the precise issues which would have been raised in such an appeal, it nonetheless seems clear that the failure of his counsel to file a timely notice of appeal after being instructed by Duell to do so establishes at least a facially sufficient violation of the prevailing standards for effective representation by counsel. Hernandez v. United States, 202 F.3d 486, 489 (2d Cir. 2000).

Turning to the second required element, however, it hardly seems debatable that the petition in this matter was untimely, considering the governing AEDPA one-year statute of limitations as applied to the relevant chronology in this matter. Since Duell has failed to make one of the two required showings for eligibility, I recommend that the court not grant him a COA.

IV. SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATION

Duell's petition was filed in December of 2007, more than four years after the date upon which his conviction became final. Nowhere in the pleadings now before the court does the petitioner demonstrate that he acted with reasonable diligence in pursuing his federal habeas claims and that there exists a basis for equitable tolling, or that he was precluded by extraordinary circumstances from filing a timely petition. Nor has petitioner offered an proof that was not available to him at the time of his plea supporting a claim of actual innocence. Accordingly, it is hereby respectfully

RECOMMENDED that the amended petition in this matter be DISMISSED as untimely; and it is further

RECOMMENDED that the court not grant petitioner a certificate of appealability this matter.

OPINION AND ORDER

SOTOMAYOR, D.J.

1 Respondent moves to dismiss this habeas petition on the ground that the claims asserted by petitioner are barred by the one-year limitations period of § 101 of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act ("AEDPA"), Pub.L. 104-132, 110 Stat. 1217 (April 24, 1996), codified at 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\). Petitioner mailed his petition to the Court over one year after the effective date of the AEDPA, and almost twelve years after completing state court direct review. For the reasons to be discussed, I grant respondent's motion to dismiss the habeas petition as untimely.

BACKGROUND

Petitioner was convicted on June 3, 1982, following a jury trial in New York State Supreme Court, Bronx County, of Murder in the Second Degree (New York Penal Law § 125.25\(1\)). Petitioner was sentenced to an indeterminate prison term of twenty-five years to life. Petitioner is currently incarcerated at Clinton Correctional Facility.

Petitioner appealed his conviction to the Supreme Court of the State of New York, Appellate Division, First Department, on the grounds that 1) the police lacked probable cause and a warrant for his arrest, and therefore the trial court should have suppressed evidence seized and statements made as a result of that arrest, and 2) the prosecutor made improper statements during summation. On May 7, 1985, the Appellate Division affirmed petitioner's conviction without opinion. People v. Cowart, 111 A.D.2d 598, 489 N.Y.S.2d 438 \(1st Dep't 1985\). On July 5, 1985, the New York State Court of Appeals denied petitioner leave to appeal. People v. Cowart, 65 N.Y.2d 927, 493 N.Y.S.2d 1045, 483 N.E.2d 138 \(1985\). Petitioner did not file a petition for certiorari with the United States Supreme Court, nor has he made any state collateral attacks on his conviction.

On April 10, 1997, the Pro Se Office of this Court received a request from petitioner for three federal habeas petition forms. These forms were not mailed to him until April 24 and were received at the Sullivan Correctional Facility (where Cowart was then incarcerated) on April 28, 1997. The instant petition was dated April 28 but not received by this Court until May 30, 1997. Respondent submitted its motion to dismiss on September 22, 1997.

In a letter dated September 25, 1997, the petitioner requested that this Court appoint counsel for purposes of opposing respondent's motion to dismiss. This Court, in an order dated October 3, 1997, asked Cowart for further information on his petition. The request for appointed counsel was denied on January 9, 1998, and Cowart was ordered to submit any further information in opposition to the motion to dismiss by January 22, 1998. No such response has been filed, and thus the Court takes Cowart's answers to the October 3 Order as his opposition. Respondent filed a reply to Cowart's answers on November 10, 1997.

DISCUSSION

Petitioner filed this petition after April 24, 1996, the effective date of the AEDPA. The AEDPA amended the habeas corpus statute to require that habeas petitions “be filed no later than one year after the completion of state court review.” 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(1\)\(A\) \(1997\). However, “[t]ime during which a properly filed state court application for collateral review is pending is excluded from the one year period.” Reyes v. Keane, 90 F.3d 676, 679 (2d Cir.1996); see 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(2\). The Second Circuit in Peterson v. Demskie, 107 F.3d 92, 93 (2d Cir.1997), recognized that it would be unfair to deny access to the federal courts to prisoners who did not have notice of the new time limits of the AEDPA. Although other circuits have ruled that “habeas petitioners should have a full year after the effective date of the AEDPA to file their petitions in federal district court,” Lindh v. Murphy, 96 F.3d 856, 866 (7th Cir.1996) (en banc), rev’d on other grounds, 521 U.S. 320, 117 S.Ct. 2059, 138 L.Ed.2d 481 (1997); see also Burns v. Morton, 134 F.3d 109, ---, 1998 U.S.App. Lexis 263, at *6, 1998 WL 15128, at *2 (3d Cir.1998); Calderon v. United States District Court for the Central District of California \(Beeler\), 112 F.3d 386, 389 (9th Cir.1997); United States v. Simmonds, 111 F.3d 737 (10th Cir.1997); this Circuit has held that “a habeas corpus petitioner is entitled to a ‘reasonable time’ after the effective date of the AEDPA to file a petition.” Peterson, 107 F.3d at 92. Furthermore, “in circumstances ... where a state prisoner has had several years to contemplate bringing a federal habeas corpus petition, we see no need to accord a full year after the effective date of the AEDPA.” Peterson, 107 F.3d at 93.

*2 However, as explained by this Court and others in this circuit, the “reasonable time” under Peterson cannot be longer than one year from the effective date of the AEDPA. See Rodriguez v. Artuz, No. 97 Civ. 4694, ---F.Supp. ---, ---, 1998 WL 9377, at *2, 1998 U.S. Dist. Lexis 131, at *4-5 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 8, 1998); Montalvo v. Portuondo, No. 97 Civ. 3336, 1997 U.S. Dist. Lexis 19288, at *5, 1997 WL 752728, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 4, 1997). The instant petition was filed at the earliest on April 28, 1998, over one year after the effective date of the AEDPA, and is thus untimely.

Cowart stresses, however, that he requested his federal petition forms from the Pro Se Office of this Court on April 10, 1997, and that he should not be held responsible for the two weeks between that request and the mailing by the Pro Se Office on April 24. The petition is not saved by this argument. Although it is true that, because it would be unfair to hold prisoners responsible for the time it takes prison authorities to deliver mail, a habeas petition is deemed filed on the date it is given to prison authorities, see Peterson, 107 F.3d at 93; see also Houston v. Lack, 487 U.S. 266, 108 S.Ct. 2379, 101 L.Ed.2d 245 (1988) (notice of appeal considered filed when delivered to prison authorities), there is no similar rule that a petition is considered filed when the prisoner requests the forms necessary to file it. More importantly, even if there were, this petition would still be untimely under Peterson. The great weight of authority in this Circuit is that where, as here, a petitioner had many years in which to file his federal petition but waited until more than eleven months after the AEDPA's effective date to file, the petition is untimely absent some compelling explanation for the delay. See Albert v. Strack, No. 97 Civ. 2978, 1998 U.S. Dist. Lexis 129, at *4-12, 1998 WL 9382, at *2-3 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 8, 1998) (collecting cases). Cowart has adduced no compelling reasons for his delay in filing, and thus his petition would be untimely even if considered filed on April 10, 1997, the date he requested forms from this Court.

Petitioner also states that he filed a motion to vacate his conviction pursuant to N.Y.Crim. Proc. Law § 440.10 at some indeterminate date after his direct review. While the filing of a proper state collateral petition does serve to toll (but not start anew) the AEDPA statute of limitations, see 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(2\), petitioner has shown this Court no evidence that this motion was in fact filed, and the respondent has affirmed to this Court that the Clerk of the Supreme Court, Bronx County, has no record of such a motion being filed.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons discussed, defendant's motion to dismiss is granted. The petition for a writ of habeas corpus is denied and dismissed.

MEMORANDUM DECISION

CHIN, D.J.

*1 Pro se petitioner David Brooks brings this petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254, challenging his conviction for seven counts of rape in the first degree and two counts of endangering the welfare of a child. For the reasons set forth below, the petition is denied.

BACKGROUND

On February 21, 1989, following a jury trial in New York State Supreme Court, New York County (Rothwax, J., presiding), Brooks was convicted on seven counts of Rape in the First Degree pursuant to [N.Y. Penal Law § 130.35\[1\]](#), and two counts of Endangering the Welfare of a Child pursuant to [N.Y. Penal Law § 260.10\[1\]](#). Brooks was sentenced to consecutive and indeterminate terms of incarceration of eight and a half to twenty-five years on each rape count and two one-year sentences on the endangering the welfare of a minor counts to run concurrently with the rape convictions.

On April 27, 1990, petitioner filed a motion to vacate his conviction pursuant to N.Y. Criminal Procedure (“CPL”) § 440 alleging that his trial counsel was ineffective: (1) for failing to object to the testimony of the rape victim because it was coached by the prosecution; (2) for failing to object to the denial of petitioner's request for the assignment of new counsel; (3) for failing to object to Judge Schlesinger's replacement by Judge Rothwax; (4) for allowing petitioner's removal from the courtroom; and (5) for failing to present allegedly exculpatory medical records. Petitioner further alleged that his appellate counsel was ineffective for failing to raise the aforementioned issues on appeal. Petitioner's motion was denied in all respects on May 16, 1990.

Brooks appealed the denial of his CPL § 440 motion to the Supreme Court of the State of New York, Appellate Division, First Department, on June 18, 1990. On August 23, 1990, the Appellate Division (Wallach, J.) granted petitioner leave to appeal and consolidated his direct appeal with his CPL § 440 appeal. In addition, the Appellate Division permitted petitioner to file a supplemental brief on September 26, 1991. On June 9, 1992, the Appellate Division affirmed both petitioner's state court conviction and the denial of his CPL § 440 motion. On June 11, 1992, petitioner applied to the New York State Court of Appeals for permission to appeal. This request was denied on August 14, 1992.

On January 9, 1993, Brooks filed a second CPL § 440 motion to vacate his judgment, wherein he alleged, inter alia, Rosario violations based on the prosecution's failure to turn over certain data analysis forms and statements from witnesses that were made to the police; that his pre-trial counsel was ineffective for neglecting to obtain petitioner's Family Court documents; that his indictment for rape in the first degree was defective; and that the Family Court Act prevented his criminal prosecution. On March 10, 1993, the New York State Supreme Court, New York County (Rothwax, J.), denied petitioner's motion without opinion. Petitioner appealed the denial of his CPL § 440 motion to the Appellate Division, First Department, on March 19, 1993. On July 6, 1993, the Appellate Division denied this appeal.

*2 On April 13, 1997, Brooks filed a third CPL § 440 motion alleging that: (1) his trial counsel was ineffective in his cross-examination by failing to secure the testimony of Edna Bell; (2) the substitution of judges during the trial denied him his right to a fair trial; (3) he was improperly removed from the courtroom; (4) the rape victim's testimony was coached by the prosecution; (5) the victim's statements to social workers were privileged and, consequently, should have been suppressed; and (6) the social worker's Family Court testimony should have been suppressed at his criminal trial. The New York State Supreme Court, New York County (Rothwax, J.), denied this motion in its entirety as procedurally barred under § 440 or as ungrounded in law.

Petitioner filed a motion to reargue on September 23, 1997. The parties provide no details of this motion other than that such motion was filed.

Petitioner filed the instant petition on May 8, 1998, alleging: (1) ineffective assistance of counsel; (2) that Judge Schlesinger failed to provide a reason for his recusal; (3) that Judge Rothwax, who replaced Judge Schlesinger, was biased against petitioner; (4) that petitioner's motion for reassignment of counsel was wrongly denied; and (5) that he was denied the right to confront his accuser when he was removed from the courtroom during the testimony of the victim and corroborating witness.

After the respondent submitted papers in opposition to the petition, petitioner requested additional time in which to respond. Although the Court granted this request, petitioner has yet to file any papers with this Court.

DISCUSSION

Under the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act

("AEDPA"), a petitioner has one year after the completion of state court review to file a habeas corpus petition. 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(1\)\(A\). If the judgment of conviction became final before April 24, 1996, the inmate has one year from the effective date of AEDPA, that is, until April 24, 1997, to file his petition. ^{FNI} Ross v. Artuz, 150 F.3d 97 (2d Cir.1998).

^{FNI}. While it is true that Peterson v. Demskie, 107 F.3d 92, 92 (2d Cir.1997), held that "a habeas corpus petitioner is entitled to a reasonable time after the effective date of the AEDPA to file a petition," the Second Circuit has since clarified that one year is reasonable. Ross v. Artuz, 150 F.3d 97, 101-02 (2d Cir.1998).

Under certain circumstances, however, the one-year provision may be tolled. 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(2\). If the petitioner has motions pending in state court, for example, the statute of limitations will temporarily stop running. Id. For this provision to be triggered, the state court motion must be "properly filed" and "pending." Id.; see, e.g., Turner v. Senkowski, No. 97-CV-653H, 1998 WL 912011, at *3 (W.D.N.Y. Nov. 23, 1998). If the conviction became final prior to the enactment of AEDPA, the only motions that are relevant to the tolling of the statute of limitations are those filed after the April 24, 1996 enactment date. "The tolling provision does not, however, 'revive' the limitations period (i.e., restart the clock at zero); it can only serve to pause a clock that has not yet fully run." Rashid v. Khulmann, 991 F.Supp. 254, 259 (S.D.N.Y.1998).

The instant petition, challenging a conviction that became final prior to April 24, 1996, must be dismissed as time-barred. The relevant dates are as follows: (1) petitioner was convicted on February 21, 1989; (2) he appealed to the Appellate Division, First Department, on June 18, 1990; (3) his conviction was affirmed on June 9, 1992; (4) he sought leave to appeal to the New York Court of Appeals on June 11, 1992; (5) he was denied this request on August 14, 1992; and (6) petitioner did not seek a writ of certiorari to the U.S. Supreme Court. His conviction, therefore, became final on November 14, 1992, ninety days after the New York Court of Appeals denied his request to appeal. See Ross, 150 F.3d at 98.

Because his conviction became final prior to the enactment of AEDPA, petitioner is afforded one year after the effective date of AEDPA, until April 24, 1997, to file his petition. Brooks filed his petition on May 8, 1998, considerably more than a year after the statute required.

S.D.N.Y., 1999.
Brooks v. Artuz
Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 1999 WL 138926 (S.D.N.Y.)

*3 The tolling of the statute of limitations does not save the petition from being time-barred. Although petitioner has brought several motions in state court since his conviction, the only motion relevant to this statute of limitations discussion is his CPL § 440 motion filed on April 13, 1997. The Assistant Attorney General concedes that this petition was properly filed, and that the tolling provision was triggered for the pendency of this motion. The motion, however, was denied on August 22, 1997. Accordingly, the statute of limitations began to run again as of that date. Because the statute of limitations was tolled from April 13, 1997, until August 22, 1997, petitioner had eleven days left in which to file a petition once the clock started ticking again on August 22, 1997.^{FN2} Petitioner did not, however, file his petition by September 2, 1997.

END OF DOCUMENT

^{FN2}. Eleven days was the time remaining between the April 13, 1997 filing of the motion and the April 24, 1997 statutory deadline.

Petitioner's motion to reargue was filed on September 23, 1997. This motion is not relevant to this discussion of the tolling provision, however, because it was filed after the running of the statute of limitations. The earlier motions (filed in 1990 and 1993) are also irrelevant, as they were filed and denied long before the one-year limitations period started to run. Because the petition was not timely filed under AEDPA, the Court need not address the petition's merits.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, the petition for a writ of habeas corpus is dismissed with prejudice. The Clerk of the Court shall enter judgment accordingly.

Anthony MEDINA, Petitioner,
v.
Michael MCGINNIS, Respondent.
No. 04 Civ.2515 SHS AJ.

Sept. 20, 2004.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

PECK, Chief Magistrate J.

*1 Petitioner Anthony Medina, represented by counsel, seeks a writ of habeas corpus from his May 14, 1999 conviction in Supreme Court, Bronx County, of first degree manslaughter, and sentence of twelve-and-a-half to twenty five years imprisonment. (Dkt. No. 1: Pet. ¶¶ 1-4.) See People v. Medina, 284 A.D.2d 122, 122, 725 N.Y.S.2d 199, 199 (1st Dep't 2001), leave to appeal denied, 96 N.Y.2d 732 N.Y.S.2d 639 (2001).

Medina's habeas petition alleges that: (1) he was denied effective assistance of counsel (Pet.¶ 12(A)); (2) he was denied due process because he was not competent at the time of trial (Pet.¶ 12(B)); and (3) he was denied due process because new evidence demonstrates his actual innocence (Pet.¶ 12(C)).

For the reasons set forth below, Medina's habeas petition should be DENIED.

FACTS

The Prosecution Case at Trial

Around 9:15 p.m. on May 3, 1996, Anthony Medina and Jose Cardenas were inside an illegal social club located at 932 Intervale Avenue in the Bronx. (State Opening: Trial Transcript ["Tr."] 17-18.) Medina shot Cardenas with a .22 caliber gun, exited the club and handed the weapon to an unidentified woman. (State Opening: Tr. 18.) When arrested, he asked, " 'who snitched me out.' " (State Opening: Tr. 19.) Medina was charged with two counts of second degree murder, first degree manslaughter, first degree reckless endangerment, and second degree and third degree criminal possession of a weapon. (State Opening: Tr. 14-16.) ^{FN1}

^{FN1}. During trial, the Assistant District Attorney moved to dismiss three of the six counts of the indictment, leaving two counts of second degree murder and one count of first degree manslaughter. (Tr. 485.) The trial judge charged the jury on those three counts and also included second degree manslaughter. (Tr. 629-41.)

May 3, 1996: Eyewitness Cepero's Testimony

On May 3, 1996 at approximately 9:00 p.m., Eugenio Cepero was in the vicinity of 932 Intervale Avenue, working on a car in front of the parking lot. (Cepero: Tr. 308.) Located at 932 Intervale Avenue was a Cuban Club where people could play pool or dominoes, drink alcohol, or purchase powder cocaine.^{FN2} (Cepero: Tr. 310-11.) Cepero described the incident that occurred on that night, as follows:

^{FN2}. Cepero admitted to entering the club earlier in the evening in order to buy powder cocaine from Cardenas. (Cepero: Tr. 311-14, 361.) Cepero sold the powdered cocaine to another individual and then used the profit to buy crack cocaine at 941 Intervale Avenue. (Cepero: Tr. 315-17, 362.)

[T]here was loud music coming from the Cuban club

across the street. So when music between records, when one record finishes, one begins, there was a muffled shot, just one shot, and then the other record became playing and all of a sudden the door flew open and whole mess of people came out of that club. So after everybody came out and they rushed away, two three girls came out and this individual came out, but before he came out, one of the girls told him to hurry up, hurry up. Then he came out. Then they went towards their left and as they rushed away, he passed a shiny object which appeared to be a gun to the girl on his right hand side that was wearing a bubble jacket. They took off down towards Southern Boulevard. (Cepero: Tr. 308-09.) FN3

FN3. Although Cepero described the clothing worn by the three girls and their approximate ages (Cepero: Tr. 323-24), he was unable to see their faces because they had their backs turned towards him. (Cepero: Tr. 392-93.)

After hearing the one shot, Cepero “looked around” and “took ... cover.” (Cepero: Tr. 321-22, 363.) According to Cepero, about fifteen to twenty people initially exited the club. (Cepero: Tr. 322-23, 331, 364.) Approximately fifteen seconds after the shot was fired, Medina exited the club. (Cepero: Tr. 324, 369.) Cepero identified Medina at trial and testified that he knew Medina by his “[s]treet name Hyper.” (Cepero: Tr. 309-10, 325.) Cepero had known Medina for about a year prior to this incident, they were friends, and Cepero had no doubt that Medina was the individual he saw exiting the club. (Cepero: Tr. 333-39).

*2 Cepero claimed he could tell that the shiny object passed from Hyper to the girl in the bubble jacket was an automatic, “about the size of a .25” caliber gun. (Cepero: Tr. 325-27, 370, 400-01.) FN4 After watching Medina hand off the weapon and leave the scene, Cepero “saw the body” and “went home.” (Cepero: Tr. 329.) On cross, however, Cepero said he stayed at the scene and observed the police activity. (Cepero: Tr. 354.) Although Cepero spoke to the police later that night, he did not tell them that he could make an identification because he “was scared, afraid,” afraid of “[g]etting hurt.” (Cepero: Tr. 332, 350, 354, 375.)

FN4. Detective Charles Koch identified the bullet recovered from Cardenas' body as a .22 caliber bullet. (Koch: Tr. 416.) A .22 caliber bullet could not be fired from a .25 caliber semiautomatic weapon. (Koch: Tr. 418, 425.) However, a .22 caliber and .25 caliber gun are “very close” in appearance. (Koch: Tr. 427.)

Testimony From Law Enforcement Personnel

On May 3, 1996, Sergeant James Caban and Officer Ricky Santos received a call to report to 932 Intervale Avenue in the Bronx. (Caban: Tr. 109-10, 123-24; Santos: Tr. 145-47, 187, 189.) They approached the scene at approximately 9:30 p.m. (Caban: Tr. 110; Santos: Tr. 187, 189.) Once they arrived at the social club, Sgt. Caban and Officer Santos “saw an open door with a man lying dead on the ground.” (Caban: Tr. 110-11; Santos: Tr. 149.) FN5 Sgt. Caban testified that “[i]t was a very very well lit area.” (Caban: Tr. 127; Santos: Tr. 152.) When Officer Santos was asked whether he saw anyone taking off as they approached, he stated, “I believe I didn't see one individual at all. If there was anybody there, it wasn't a major number. It could have been maybe one or two people.” (Santos: Tr. 148-49, 157, 161, 190.) Similarly, when Officer Jamie Cuevas arrived at the scene after the original officers, from the time he approached the scene until he left a couple of hours later, he did not see any civilians outside. (Cuevas: Tr. 206-08, 225-26, 229.)

FN5. Dr. Joseph Cohen of the Medical Examiner's Office testified that Cardenas “died as a result of [a] gun wound of the chest which caused perforations of both lungs and his heart causing significant internal bleeding.” (Cohen: Tr. 269.) “The bullet passed through the torso and lodged on the left side of the torso. The trajectory was front to back, it was right to left, and very slightly downward.” (Cohen: Tr. 260, 270, 280.)

At approximately 10:30 p.m. Detective Shaw of the Crime Scene Unit arrived at 932 Intervale Avenue. (Shaw: Tr. 49, 76.) Det. Shaw did a walk-through of the social club, and saw the body of Jose Cardenas lying on the ground. (Shaw: Tr. 51-53.) Det. Shaw drew a “rough diagram of the location itself,” took “photographs of the exterior of the location and the interior of the location,” and dusted for fingerprints. (Shaw: Tr. 52.) Edward Young, a technician employed by the Bronx District Attorney, videotaped the location the way it appeared at 10:45 p.m. that night. (Young: Tr. 99-100.) Four fingerprints and some cigarette butts were taken from inside the social club.^{FN6} (Shaw: Tr. 72-73, 75, 87-92, 96.) There were no empty shell casings or weapons recovered at the scene. (Shaw: Tr. 58-59, 80, 85; Caban: Tr. 112, 119; Santos: Tr. 184, 197-98.)^{FN7}

^{FN6}. Medina’s fingerprints were never submitted for comparison with those taken. (McKeon: Tr. 475.)

^{FN7}. Det. Koch testified that when an automatic gun is fired, as opposed to a revolver, “it extracts the casing and ejects it from the firearm.” (Koch: Tr. 410.) The normal ejection of the casing would be “to the right and to the rear, approximately three to four feet.” (Koch: Tr. 412.) However, the casing can bounce or roll after hitting the ground. (Koch: Tr. 412-13.) It is possible that the shell casing could not be ejected because it had jammed in the gun. (Koch: Tr. 422-23, 426.) Defense counsel on cross-examination got Det. Koch to admit that he could only “guess” as to what happened in this case. (Koch: Tr. 423-24.)

Cepero Informs the Police What He Saw; Medina's Arrest and Statement

On January 4, 1997, Detective McKeon of the 41st Precinct was assigned to investigate Cardena's murder. (McKeon: Tr. 440.) At about 1:40 a.m., Detective McKeon and two other officers interviewed Medina in the 41st Precinct detective squad interview room. (McKeon: Tr. 442-44.) After Det. McKeon advised Medina of his Miranda rights (McKeon: Tr. 445-46), Det. McKeon interviewed Medina (McKeon: Tr. 447). Det. McKeon wrote down the story as Medina stated it and read the statement back to him. (McKeon: Tr. 447-48.) Once Medina agreed the statement was accurate, Det. McKeon had Medina sign it. (McKeon: Tr. 448.) Medina's statement read:

*3 I used to work at 932 Intervale Avenue, social club, about four or five times. I worked at the door and I checked for the cops. This social club sold cocaine.... On the day the old Cuban guy got killed I was at 163 Street and Kelley Street by the bodega and a coworker from the ... club, Rafael ... came up to me on the corner and told me that two male blacks wearing masks came into the social club armed with a .9 millimeter and a Tech 9 ^{FN8} and demanded money and drugs. Rafael said that there was no money, there was no more drugs in there and they male blacks didn't get nothing and they, male blacks, started shooting. After telling me this I walked to 163 Street and Intervale Avenue and met Danny.... I asked Danny what happened.

^{FN8}. Det. Koch stated that a .22 caliber bullet could not have been fired from a .9 millimeter or Tech 9 weapon. (Koch: Tr. 419.)

Danny said somebody tried to rob the place and there was some shooting. I told Tyson ... that I shot in there, meaning that I killed the guy. I told Tyson this to make myself look big. I didn't kill this guy and I didn't even shoot him there.

(McKeon: Tr. 453-54.) Medina was not placed under arrest after making the statement. (McKeon: Tr. 455.)

On January 21, 1997, Cepero entered 941 Intervale Avenue around 8:30 p.m. in order to buy crack cocaine. (Cepero: Tr. 340-41.) As he walked up the stairway, he overheard Medina say, “why you dissing me, I'll pop you like I popped the Cuban.” (Cepero: Tr. 341-42, 346, 384, 385.) Cepero knew that it was Medina because he recognized his voice. (Cepero: Tr. 341.) Cepero left the building, waited for Medina to leave, and then went in to buy drugs. (Cepero: Tr. 342-43, 390.)

Two days after he overheard the conversation in 941 Intervale Avenue, Cepero was arrested. (Cepero: Tr. 376, 383-84.) Having something to gain from the information, Cepero identified Medina as the shooter who was wanted for Cardenas' murder. (Cepero: Tr. 350, 378-80, 383-84.) According to Cepero, Detective McKeon “talked to [Cepero], [and] he said he might be able to get [Cepero] a lighter sentence.” (Cepero: Tr. 351.) When questioned further about this exchange on cross-examination, Cepero stated that he told Det. McKeon that he expected a lighter sentence in return for the information and Det. McKeon said “[t]hey [would] see what they [could] do.” (Cepero: Tr. 380.) Cepero was allowed to plead to a misdemeanor and received a sentence of 90 days, instead of a felony with a possible sentence of three and a half to seven years. (Cepero: Tr. 377-83.)

Medina was arrested on February 12, 1997. (McKeon: Tr. 441, 456, 475-76.) Det. McKeon informed him that “he was being arrested for the murder of Mr. Cardenas from May 3rd of 1996.” (McKeon: Tr. 457.) Detective Peter Tarsnane was present when Medina was placed in the cell at the 41st Precinct. (McKeon: Tr. 459-60, 469-70; Tarsnane: Tr. 497-98.) After McKeon left the room where Medina's cell was located, Det. Tarsnane testified that Medina asked, “ ‘who snitched me out.’ ” (Tarsnane: Tr. 499.) Det. Tarsnane told Det. McKeon about what Medina said. (Tarsnane: Tr. 500-01.)

The Defense Case at Trial

*4 The defense called no witnesses (see Tr. 503-06), but made it's case by cross-examining the prosecution's witnesses.

Defense counsel's theme was that “[n]obody's going to dispute there was a shooting and nobody's going to dispute that Mr. Cardenas died as a result of that shooting.... What we are questioning is whether the police got the right person.” (Defense Opening: Tr. 26.) In closing argument, defense counsel noted that while motive was not an element of the crime, it was important to consider in determining if Medina was the shooter, and he reminded the jury that no motive evidence was presented. (Defense Closing: Tr. 509-10, 543-44.) He also noted that there was no physical evidence tying Medina to the crime; rather, the entire case was based on Cepero's testimony. (Defense Closing: Tr. 527-32, 543-44.)

Defense counsel argued that Cepero's testimony was unreliable. In addition to referring to Cepero more than once during summation as a “crack head” (Defense Closing: Tr. 521-23; see Cepero: Tr. 300) and questioning his motive for testifying (e.g., Defense Closing: Tr. 536-37), defense counsel also pointed out inconsistencies between Cepero's prior statements and trial testimony.

First, before the grand jury Cepero stated that “seven or eight people ran out” after the shooting (Cepero: Tr. 367-68), but at trial, Cepero changed this number to fifteen or twenty (Cepero: Tr. 322-23, 331, 364). (See Defense Closing: Tr. 514.) Second, Cepero stated that the police spoke to him and to about fifteen or twenty people the night of the incident (Cepero: Tr. 332, 354-57), yet none of the testifying police officers recalled seeing or interviewing anyone on that night (Caban: Tr. 119-20; Santos: Tr. 149-50, 157, 161, 183, 190, 194-95; Cuevas: Tr. 220-21, 225). Third, Cepero testified at trial that Medina pulled the shiny object from his waistband (Cepero: Tr. 396), but in a statement taken down by Detective McKeon and signed by Cepero, Cepero stated that Medina had the gun in his hand (Cepero: Tr. 397-99). (See Defense Closing: Tr. 520-21.) Fourth, defense counsel pointed out to the jury that while Cepero at trial claimed to overhear Medina say “why you dissing me, I'll pop you like I popped the Cuban” (Cepero: Tr. 341-42, 346, 384-85), on January 23, 1997 Cepero had stated to Det. McKeon that he had heard Medina say, “I'll pop you like the Cuban,” which does not say Medina was the shooter. (Cepero: Tr. 387; Defense Closing: Tr. 534-36.) Defense counsel also established through Cepero that Medina liked to brag. (Cepero: Tr. 389.) ^{FN9}

^{FN9}. On redirect, however, Cepero said it did not sound like Medina was bragging. (Cepero: Tr. 401.)

Defense counsel also attempted to show that Cepero was too far away from the social club's entrance to see Medina exit with a gun. ^{FN10} In order to determine this distance, Medina's counsel questioned Cepero and the police officers. When Cepero was asked how far he was located from the front door of the social club, he replied “[f]ifty, fifty-five feet. I don't know, I never measured it.” (Cepero: Tr. 372.) Defense counsel asked, “[s]o if somebody had come in here and testified that it was a hundred and sixty feet, you would say that that person's incorrect; is that right?” (Cepero: Tr. 372-73.) Cepero answered that he would not know. (Cepero: Tr. 373.) Defense counsel walked to back of the courtroom and asked Cepero if that was about how far away he was from Medina on the night of the incident. (Cepero: Tr. 373.) Cepero said that the distance from the car to the front door was further by “[a]bout half a courtroom more.” (Cepero: Tr. 373.) In contrast to Cepero's guestimate, on cross-examination by the defense, Officer Santos testified that the distance from the fence near the parking area (Cepero's location) to the front door of 932 Intervale Avenue was about 160 yards, or the length of about two football fields. (Santos: Tr. 200-01, 203.) On redirect by the prosecution, Officer Santos stated that when measuring, he found the distance to be about 150 paces. (Santos: Tr. 202.) During summation, Medina's counsel gave police officer Santos the “benefit of the doubt” that he probably had meant to say FN1 160 feet instead of yards. (Defense Closing: Tr. 518.)

FN10. Cepero stated that a .25 caliber automatic handgun is about three-and-a-half to four inches long. (Cepero: Tr. 371.)

FN11. Det. McKeon testified that the distance from a light pole, located in about the same area as the fence, to the front of 932 Intervale is 109 feet. (McKeon: Tr. 463.) In order to measure this distance, Det. McKeon “actually paced off the feet.” (McKeon: Tr. 463.)

*5 Defense counsel also argued that since no shell casing was found at the crime scene, it was more reasonable to believe the shooter used a revolver than the automatic that Cepero said he saw Medina give to a girl. (Defense Closing: Tr. 515-17.)

Verdict and Sentence

On April 22, 1999, the jury found Medina not guilty on both counts of second degree murder and found him guilty of first degree manslaughter. (Verdict: Tr. 659-62.)

On May 14, 1999, Medina was sentenced to twelve-and-a-half to twenty-five years imprisonment. (Dkt.

No. 1: Pet. ¶ 3; Dkt. No. 5: A.D.A. Markoe Aff. ¶ 5.)

Direct Appeal

On appeal to the First Department, represented by different, appointed appellate counsel, Medina argued that: (1) the judge improperly assisted the prosecution during a pre-trial hearing (Medina 1st Dep't Br. at 12-14); (2) the prosecutor failed to prove Medina's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt and the verdict was against the weight of the evidence (id. at 15-16); (3) the prosecutor improperly elicited testimony that Medina did not make a statement following his arrest (id. at 16-18); and (4) Medina's sentence should be reduced in the interest of justice to the minimum permissible term (id. at 18-20).

On June 5, 2001, the First Department affirmed Medina's conviction, holding:

The verdict was based on legally sufficient evidence and was not against the weight of the evidence. Issues of credibility were properly presented to the jury and there is no reason to disturb its determinations.

Defendant's claim that the court improperly assisted the prosecutor during the suppression hearing is not preserved for appellate review and we decline to review it in the interest of justice. Were we to review this claim, we would find that the court's advice to the prosecutor that he should elicit additional testimony was entirely appropriate.

We perceive no basis for reduction of sentence.

Defendant's remaining contentions are unpreserved and we decline to review them in the interest of justice. Were we to review these claims, we would reject them.

Medina's C.P.L. § 440 Motion

On October 11, 2002, represented by his present counsel, Medina filed a C.P.L. § 440.10 motion to vacate his conviction on the following grounds: (1) the trial court erred in failing to order a competency hearing (10/11/02 Medina C.P.L. § 440 Br. at 5-9), and (2) trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to (a) properly investigate the crime scene, (b) request a competency examination, (c) investigate Medina's medical and psychiatric history, (d) interview a potentially exculpatory witness, (e) thoroughly impeach the prosecution's primary witness, and (f) inform Medina of his right to testify (id. at 9-16).

*6 On June 16, 2003, Medina's counsel filed a supplemental motion pursuant to C.P.L. § 440.10\(1\)\(g\), asserting that a written recantation from Cepero constituted newly discovered evidence which proved Medina's actual innocence. (6/16/03 Medina Supp. C.P.L. § 440 Motion.) ^{FN12}

^{FN12.} The motion was based on an affidavit from a private investigator and a handwritten statement signed by Cepero, stating that Cepero had told police he saw a "shiny object" in Medina's hands but Det. McKeon told him to say it was a gun. (Id., Exs. B-C.)

Justice Joseph Fisch denied Medina's C.P.L. § 440 motions in their entirety on October 22, 2003. (10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order.) As to Medina's mental competence, Justice Fisch held that "[t]he record, in the instant case, is devoid of any information that would have suggested to this Court that the defendant was not fit to proceed. In fact, the record demonstrates the contrary, and reveals many instances of the defendant's obvious participation in the proceedings and awareness of what was taking place." (10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order at 3.) Justice Fisch elaborated:

In the instant case, the defendant's purported mental state was never brought to the attention, nor obviously apparent to the trial Court, thus failing to raise a doubt regarding the defendant's competence. The defendant did not manifest by words or actions any reason for this Court to believe nor even suspect that he was not competent to stand trial. The defendant's appearance was that of an active, rational participant throughout his entire trial, in full comprehension of the proceedings. He executed a written waiver of his right to be present during sidebar conferences, consulted with his attorney regarding jury selection and actions to be taken with regard to specific jurors. He prepared written questions for his attorney to use during cross examination, consulted with his attorney regarding the introduction of evidence during trial and had his attorney inform the court of his personal needs during trial. All these actions demonstrated to the Court that the defendant understood the nature of the proceedings and was able to assist in his defense. The Court had no reasonable grounds to believe the defendant was not competent to stand trial. The defendant's motion pursuant to CPL § 440.10\(1\)\(e\) must, therefore, be denied in its entirety.

(Id.)

Justice Fisch also denied Medina's ineffective assistance claim. (Id. at 4-8.) Based on defense counsel's affidavit, Justice Fisch found that while defense counsel was aware that Medina "suffered from a variety of psychiatric maladies, these ailments never led [defense counsel] to believe the defendant was unable to understand the nature of the proceedings against him nor to assist in his own defense." (Id. at 4-5.) Justice Fisch found defense counsel's vigorous cross-examination of Cepero to have been effective. (Id. at 6.) Justice Fisch concluded that he was "hard pressed to find the trial strategy of [defense counsel] deficient when the defendant was acquitted of the top charge of Murder," and in general, found counsel's zealous advocacy and vigorous cross-examination to have provided meaningful representation. (Id. at 7-8.) Finally, as to Medina's new evidence claim, Justice Fisch found that "Cepero's affidavit is not of such character that it will probably change the result or verdict, if a new trial were granted." (Id. at 8.) The Cepero affidavit was "of an unreliable nature" (id. at 8-9); "[t]here is no form of proof so unreliable as recanting testimony" (id. at 9).

*7 On November 17, 2003, Medina moved pro se to reargue and renew his § 440 motion. Justice Fisch denied the motion to reargue on February 9, 2004. (2/9/04 Justice Fisch Order.)

The First Department denied leave to appeal denial of Medina's § 440 motion on February 20, 2004. (2/20/04 1st Dep't Order.) The First Department denied leave to appeal Medina's motion to reargue on May 11, 2004. (Dkt. No. 5: A.D.A. Markoe Aff. Ex. 3: 5/11/04 1st Dep't Order.)

Medina's Current Federal Habeas Corpus Petition

Represented by Gary Farrell, the same counsel who represented him in his C.P.L. § 440 motions, Medina's federal habeas corpus petition alleges that: (1) he was denied effective assistance of counsel (Pet.¶ 12(A)); (2) he was denied due process because he was not competent at the time of trial (Pet.¶ 12(B)); and (3) he was denied due process because new evidence demonstrates his innocence (Pet.¶ 12(C)).

Before the Court can determine whether Medina is entitled to federal habeas relief, the Court must address the proper habeas corpus review standard under the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act ("AEDPA").

In enacting the AEDPA, Congress significantly "modifie[d] the role of federal habeas courts in reviewing petitions filed by state prisoners." Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 403, 120 S.Ct. 1495, 1518 (2000). The AEDPA imposed a more stringent review standard, as follows:

(d) An application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court shall not be granted with respect to any claim that was adjudicated on the merits in State court proceedings unless the adjudication of the claim-

(1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or

(2) ... was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

^{FN22}. The Supreme Court explained:

[T]he range of reasonable judgment can depend in part on the nature of the relevant rule. If a legal rule is specific, the range may be narrow. Applications of the rule may be plainly correct or incorrect. Other rules are more general, and their meaning must emerge in application over the course of time. Applying a general standard to a specific case can demand a substantial element of judgment. As a result, evaluating whether a rule application was unreasonable requires considering the rule’s specificity. The more general the rule, the more leeway courts have in reaching outcomes in case by case determinations.

Yarborough v. Alvarado, 124 S.Ct. at 2149.

Moreover, the Second Circuit has held “that a state court determination is reviewable under AEDPA if the state decision unreasonably failed to extend a clearly established, Supreme Court defined, legal principle to situations which that principle should have, in reason, governed.” *Kennaugh v. There is force to this argument. Section 2254\(d\)\(1\) would be undermined if habeas courts introduced rules not clearly established under the guise of extensions to existing law. At the same time, the difference between applying a rule and extending it is not always clear. Under the AEDPA, in short, the federal courts “must give the state court's adjudication a high degree of deference.” Yung v. Walker, 296 F.3d at 134.

Even where the state court decision does not specifically refer to either the federal claim or to relevant federal case law, the deferential AEDPA review standard applies:

*9 For the purposes of AEDPA deference, a state court “adjudicate[s]” a state prisoner's federal claim on the merits when it (1) disposes of the claim “on the merits,” and (2) reduces its disposition to judgment. When a state court does so, a federal habeas court must defer in the manner prescribed by 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1) to the state court's decision on the federal claim—even if the state court does not explicitly refer to either the federal claim or to relevant federal case law.

Sellan v. Kuhlman, 261 F.3d at 312; accord Early v. Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 8, 123 S.Ct. 362, 365 (2002) (State court not required to cite Supreme Court cases, or even be aware of them, to be entitled to AEDPA deference, “so long as neither the reasoning nor the result of the state-court decision contradicts them.”); Francolino v. Kuhlman, 365 F.3d 137, 141 (2d Cir. Apr. 20, 2004) (Where “the Appellate Division concluded its opinion by stating that it had ‘considered and rejected defendants’ remaining claims,” AEDPA deference applies.); Jenkins v. Artuz, 294 F.3d 284, 291 (2d Cir.2002) (“In Sellan, we found that an even more concise Appellate Division disposition—the word ‘denied’—triggered AEDPA deference.”).^{FN24} “By its terms, § 2254(d) requires such deference only with respect to a state-court ‘adjudication on the merits,’ not to a disposition ‘on a procedural, or other, ground.’ Where it is ‘impossible to discern the Appellate Division's conclusion on [the relevant] issue,’ a federal court should not give AEDPA deference to the state appellate court's ruling.” Miranda v. Bennett, 322 F.3d 171, 177-78 (2d Cir.2003) (citations omitted).^{FN25} Of course, “[i]f there is no [state court] adjudication on the merits, then the pre-AEDPA, de novo standard of review applies.” Cotto v. Herbert, 331 F.3d at 230.

^{FN24} Accord, e.g., Dallio v. Spitzer, 343 F.3d at 559-60; Parsad v. Greiner, 337 F.3d at 180-81; Cotto v. Herbert, 331 F.3d 217, 230 (2d

The Second Circuit “recognize[d] that a state court's explanation of the reasoning underlying its decision would ease our burden in applying the ‘unreasonable application’ or ‘contrary to’ tests.” Sellan v. Kuhlman, 261 F.3d at 312. Where the state court does not explain its reasoning, the Second Circuit articulated the analytic steps to be followed by a federal habeas court:

We adopt the Fifth Circuit's succinct articulation of the analytic steps that a federal habeas court should follow in determining whether a federal claim has been adjudicated “on the merits” by a state court. As the Fifth Circuit has explained, “[W]e determine whether a state court's disposition of a petitioner's claim is on the merits by considering: (1) what the state courts have done in similar cases; (2) whether the history of the case suggests that the state court was aware of any ground for not adjudicating the case on the merits; and (3) whether the state court's opinion suggests reliance upon procedural grounds rather than a determination on the merits.” Mercadel v. Cain, 179 F.3d 271, 274 (5th Cir.1999).

^{FN25} The Second Circuit in Miranda v. Bennett continued: “Generally, when the Appellate Division opinion states that a group of contentions is either without merit ‘or’ procedurally barred, the decision does not disclose which claim in the group has been rejected on which ground. If the record makes it clear, however, that a given claim had been properly preserved for appellate review, we will conclude that it fell into the 'without merit' part of the disjunct even if it was not expressly discussed by the Appellate Division." Id. at 178.

In addition to the standard of review of legal issues, the AEDPA provides a deferential review standard for state court factual determinations: "a determination of a factual issue made by a State court shall be presumed to be correct." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1). "The petitioner bears the burden of 'rebutting the presumption of correctness by clear and convincing evidence.'" Parsad v. Greiner, 337 F.3d at 181 (quoting § 2254(e)(1)).

Here, Medina's habeas claims were decided on the merits by the § 440 court, and hence AEDPA deference applies.

II. THE STATE TRIAL JUDGE'S FAILURE TO ORDER A COMPETENCY EXAMINATION DID NOT DEPRIVE MEDINA OF HIS DUE PROCESS RIGHT TO A FAIR TRIAL

A. The Applicable Law ^{FN26}

^{FN26}. For a prior decision by this Judge discussing the applicable law regarding a trial judge's duty with respect to a criminal defendant's mental competence to stand trial, see Johnson v. Keane, 974 F.Supp. 225, 236-40 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (Preska, D.J. & Peck, M.J.).

It is black letter law that subjecting a mentally incompetent defendant to trial violates the defendant's due process rights. Indeed, the Supreme Court has explained that this right has been recognized since the time of Blackstone's Commentaries:

It has long been accepted that a person whose mental condition is such that he lacks the capacity to understand the nature and object of the proceedings against him, to consult with counsel, and to assist in preparing his defense may not be subjected to a trial. Thus, Blackstone wrote that one who became 'mad' after the commission of an offense should not be arraigned for it 'because he is not able to plead to it with that advice and caution that he ought.' Similarly, if he became 'mad' after pleading, he should not be tried, 'for how can he make his defense?' 4 W. Blackstone Commentaries, *24.... [T]he prohibition is fundamental to an adversary system of justice....

*10 In Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. 375, 86 S.Ct. 836, 15 L.Ed.2d 815 (1966), we held that [a state's] failure to observe procedures adequate to protect a defendant's right not to be tried or convicted while incompetent to stand trial deprives him of his due process right to a fair trial.

Drope v. Missouri, 420 U.S. 162, 171-72, 95 S.Ct. 896, 903-04 (1975). ^{FN27} Since convicting an incompetent defendant is a fundamental constitutional error, "[i]t follows as a corollary that the failure to hold a required competency hearing deprives a defendant of his constitutional right to a fair trial and renders the conviction void." Nicks v. United States, 955 F.2d 161, 167, 168 (2d Cir.1992); accord, e.g., Harris v. Kuhlmann, 346 F.3d 330, 350 (2d Cir.2003); Griffin v. Lockhart, 935 F.2d 926, 929 (8th Cir.1991); *Cruz v. Accordingly, the federal courts have granted habeas corpus petitions where a potentially incompetent defendant was tried without a competence hearing. E.g., Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. 375, 386, 86 S.Ct. 836, 842 (1966); Silverstein v. Henderson, 706 F.2d 361, 369 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 864, 104 S.Ct. 195 (1983).

*11 Criminal Procedure Law § 730 establishes the procedures by which New York courts determine whether a defendant is mentally competent to stand trial. See Mead v. Walker, 839 F.Supp. at 1034. C.P.L. § 730.30 provides in pertinent part that:

1. At any time after a defendant is arraigned upon an accusatory instrument other than a felony complaint and before the imposition of sentence, or at any time after a defendant is arraigned upon a felony complaint and before he is held for the action of the grand jury, the court wherein the criminal action is pending must issue an order of examination when it is of the opinion that the defendant may be an incapacitated person.

2. When the examination reports submitted to the court show that each psychiatric examiner is of the opinion that the defendant is not an incapacitated person, the court may, on its own motion, conduct a hearing to determine the issue of capacity, and it must conduct a hearing upon motion therefor by the defendant or by the district attorney. If no motion for a hearing is made, the criminal action against the defendant must proceed. If, following a hearing, the court is satisfied that the defendant is not an incapacitated person, the criminal action against him must proceed; if the court is not so satisfied, it must issue a further order of examination directing that the defendant be examined by different psychiatric examiners designated by the director.

A defendant being tried in federal court is afforded similar protection by 18 U.S.C. § 4241:

(a) Motion to determine competency of defendant.-At any time after the commencement of a prosecution for an offense and prior to the sentencing of the defendant, the defendant or the attorney for the Government may file a motion for a hearing to determine the mental competency of the defendant. The court shall grant the motion, or shall order such a hearing on its own motion, if there is reasonable cause to believe that the defendant may presently be suffering from a mental disease or defect rendering him mentally incompetent to the extent that he is unable to understand the nature and consequences of the proceedings against him or to assist properly in his defense.

(b) Psychiatric or psychological examination and report.-Prior to the date of the hearing, the court may order that a psychiatric or psychological examination of the defendant be conducted, and that a psychiatric or psychological report be filed with the court....

While there is some variation in the procedures used in the New York and federal courts,^{FN28} the standard to be employed by the trial judge under New York or federal case law is the same. “[W]hen the demeanor of the defendant or other evidence raises doubt as to [the defendant’s] competence to stand trial, it is the trial court’s duty to order a hearing sua sponte.” *Silverstein v. Expressed another way, “the trial court must order a hearing when there is ‘reasonable ground’ for believing that the defendant may be incompetent to stand trial.” Id. at 369; accord, e.g., *Pate v. ^{FN28}. For example, in New York a psychiatric examination is required if the court believes the defendant may be incapacitated, while in federal court an examination before a competency hearing is discretionary. Compare C.P.L. § 730.30(1) with 18 U.S.C. § 4241(a).

*12 Conversely, of course, there is no requirement to order a competency examination or hearing if the trial court has not been given reasonable cause to believe that a defendant may be incompetent. See, e.g., United States v. Quinteri, 306 F.3d at 1234 & n. 10; United States v. Nichols, 56 F.3d at 414-15; United States v. Kirsh, 54 F.3d at 1070 (“the failure to conduct a full competency hearing is not a ground for reversal when the defendant appeared to be competent during trial”); Hernandez v. Ylst, 930 F.2d at 716 & n. 3 (“A Pate hearing is not required, however, absent a ‘substantial’ or ‘bona fide’ doubt of competency.”); United States v. Vamos, 797 F.2d at 1150; United States ex rel. Roth v. Zelker, 455 F.2d 1105, 1108 (2d Cir.) (competency hearing not mandated “if the evidence does not warrant one”), cert. denied, 408 U.S. 927, 92 S.Ct. 2512 (1972); Rollins v. Leonardo, 733 F.Supp. at 768; Dennis v. Turner, 729 F.Supp. 15, 16 (S.D.N.Y.1990); People v. Morgan, 87 N.Y.2d at 880, 638 N.Y.S.2d at 943; People v. Armlin, 37 N.Y.2d at 171, 371 N.Y.S.2d at 695. Otherwise, the statute could be abused to provide an automatic continuance of the trial date at a defendant’s request. See, e.g., United States v. Nichols, 56 F.3d at 415 (“Such a rule would allow a manipulative defendant (as Judge Korman suspected Mason to be) to bring the trial to a halt at his whim.”); United States v. Hall, 523 F.2d 665, 667 (2d Cir.1975).

The requirement that the trial judge determine whether a defendant is competent to stand trial if there is reasonable ground for believing the defendant incompetent is required not only by the New York and federal statutes, but also by the Constitution’s due process clause. E.g., Harris v. Kuhlmann, 346 F.3d at 349-50; United States v. Quinteri, 306 F.3d at 1232; United States v. Nichols, 56 F.3d at 416; Nicks v. United States, 955 F.2d at 168 (citing Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. at 385, 86 S.Ct. at 842); United States v. Dav, 949 F.2d 973, 982 (8th Cir.1991) (“The issue framed by Pate and Drope is not whether the defendant was competent to stand trial or plead guilty, but whether the absence of a hearing on the question of his competency amounted, in the circumstances of the case, to a denial of due process.”), cert. denied, 114 S.Ct. 2140 (1994); Hernandez v. Ylst, 930 F.2d at 716; United States v. Auen, 846 F.2d 872, 877 (2d Cir.1988); Galandreo v.

Perlman, No. 02-CV-6799, 03-MISC-0066, 2003 WL 23198790 at *17 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 31, 2003) (Weinstein, D.J.).

The determination of whether there is “reasonable cause” to believe a defendant may be incompetent rests in the discretion of the trial judge. See, e.g., United States v. Gabb, 2003 WL 22533190 at *2; United States v. Quintieri, 306 F.3d at 1232-33; United States v. Nichols, 56 F.3d at 414; United States v. Vamos, 797 F.2d at 1150; *Newfield v. ^{FN29} For the procedural safeguards required by statute and Constitutional due process to be effective, however, the trial court “must necessarily exercise its discretion and make findings on the record concerning the defendant’s competency where the facts presented to the court warrant such an inquiry.” United States v. Auen, 846 F.2d at 877-78; see also, e.g., United States v. Garrett, 903 F.2d 1105, 1116 (7th Cir.1990).

*13 The Supreme Court has recognized that there are “no fixed or immutable signs which invariably indicate the need for further inquiry to determine fitness to proceed.” Drope v. Missouri, 420 U.S. at 180, 95 S.Ct. at 908.^{FN30} The Supreme Court, however, has recognized some of the factors that the trial court should consider: “evidence of a defendant’s irrational behavior, his demeanor at trial, and any prior medical opinion on competence to stand trial are all relevant in determining whether further inquiry is required, but even one of those factors standing alone may, in some circumstances, be sufficient.” Drope v. Missouri, 420 U.S. at 180, 95 S.Ct. at 908; see also, e.g., United States v. Gabb, 2003 WL 22533190 at *2 (“[A] district court must consider many factors when determining whether it has ‘reasonable cause’ to order a competency hearing.... ‘A district court also often orders and reviews psychiatric records when determining whether to hold a hearing.’ ”); *United States v. psychiatric records when determining whether to hold a hearing.”); United States v. Nichols, 56 F.3d at 411 (“In making a determination of competency, the [trial] court may rely on a member of factors, including medical opinion and the court’s observation of the defendant’s compartment.”); United States v. Day, 949 F.2d at 982 (factors include “any evidence of [defendant’s] irrational behavior, his demeanor before the trial court, available medical evaluations, and whether trial counsel questioned the defendant’s competency before the court.”); United States v. Hems, 901 F.2d at 295-96 (“the court may take account of a number of factors, including the defendant’s comportment in the courtroom.”); Etoria v. Bennett, 292 F.Supp.2d at 467 (“Three relevant areas of inquiry include defendant’s irrational behavior, his demeanor at trial, and medical opinion.”); People v. Tortorici, 92 N.Y.2d at 766, 686 N.Y.S.2d at 351; People v. Morgan, 87 N.Y.2d at 880-81, 638 N.Y.S.2d at 943-44.

^{FN30} Accord, e.g., Harris v. Kuhlmann, 346 F.3d at 350; United States v. Quintieri, 306 F.3d at 1233; Silverstein v. Henderson, 706 F.2d at 369.

In addition, “deference is owed to the [trial] court’s determinations based on observation of the defendant during the [pretrial and trial] proceedings.” United States v. Vamos, 797 F.2d at 1150; see also, e.g., United States v. Gabb, 2003 WL 22533190 at *2; Harris v. Kuhlmann, 346 F.3d at 355; United States v. Quintieri, 306 F.3d at 1233; United States v. Nichols, 56 F.3d at 414; United States v. Kirsh, 54 F.3d at 1070 (trial court’s “view of the defendant’s competency based on its observations at trial is entitled to deference”); United States v. Oliver, 626 F.2d at 259 (trial judge “justifiably relied on his extended observations of [the defendant] in deciding that he had sufficient mental capacity to stand trial”).^{FN31} ^{FN31} This is especially so where the trial judge questions the defendant (outside the jury’s presence) to explore defendant’s competency. See, e.g., United States v. Oliver, 626 F.2d at 259; People v. Russell, 74 N.Y.2d 901, 902, 549 N.Y.S.2d 646, 647, 548 N.E.2d 1297, 1298 (1989) (trial judge’s direct questioning of the defendant along with his overall ability to observe defendant at trial, supported finding of competence).

*14 Defense counsel's opinion as to defendant's competence or incompetence also is an important factor to consider. As the Second Circuit has pointed out, "since competency involves an inability to assist in the preparation of a defense or rationally to comprehend the nature of the proceedings, failure by trial counsel to indicate the presence of such difficulties provides substantial evidence of the defendant's competence." United States v. Vamos, 797 F.2d at 1150; see, e.g., Drope v. Missouri, 420 U.S. at 177 n.13, 95 S.Ct. at 906 n.13 ("Although we do not, of course, suggest that courts must accept without question a lawyer's representation concerning the competence of his client, ... an expressed doubt in that regard by one with 'the closest contact with the defendant' ... is unquestionably a factor which should be considered."); United States v. Gabb, 2003 WL 22533190 at *3; United States v. Estrada, 2003 WL 562291 at *2; United States v. Quintieri, 306 F.3d at 1233; United States v. Kirsh, 54 F.3d at 1071 (quoting Vamos); United States v. Day, 949 F.2d at 982 (factors include "whether trial counsel questioned the defendant's competency before the court"); Griffin v. Lockhart, 935 F.2d at 930, 931; Hernandez v. Ylst, 930 F.2d at 718 ("While the opinion of [defendant's] counsel certainly is not determinative, a defendant's counsel is in the best position to evaluate a client's comprehension of the proceedings."); United States v. Renfro, 825 F.2d 763, 767 (3d Cir.1987) ("Other factors [besides the factors listed in Drope] relevant to the [competency] determination may include an attorney's representation about his client's competency."); United States ex rel. Roth v. Zelker, 455 F.2d at 1108 (the "opinion of a defendant's attorney as to his ability to understand the nature of the proceedings and to cooperate in the preparation of his defense, is indeed significant and probative.").^{FN32}

^{FN32}. See also, e.g., Lopez v. Walker, 239 F.Supp.2d 368, 374 (S.D.N.Y.2003) ("[G]iven the frequency and nature of contact between attorney and client, an attorney has perhaps the greatest opportunity to notice any behavior that might signify incompetence in his client. Thus, defense counsel's inaction with regard to his client's competency is particularly strong evidence of defendant's mental state."); People v. Morgan, 87 N.Y.2d at 880, 638 N.Y.S.2d at 943-44, 662 N.E.2d at 261-62 (counsel's opinion is a factor but it does not "serve as an automatic substitute for the court's statutory discretion"); People v. Gelikkaya, 84 N.Y.2d 456, 460, 618 N.Y.S.2d 895, 897, 643 N.E.2d 517, 519 (1994) (noting that "defense counsel ... was in the best position to assess defendant's capacity").

Finally, the Supreme Court has held that even when a defendant is deemed competent at the beginning of the case, a trial court must always be aware of circumstances pointing to a change in defendant's competency. Drope v. Missouri, 420 U.S. at 182, 95 S.Ct. at 908 ("Even when a defendant is competent at the commencement of his trial, a trial court must always be alert to circumstances suggesting a change that would render the accused unable to meet the standards of competence to stand trial.").^{FN33} ^{FN33}. See, e.g., United States v. Mason, 52 F.3d 1286, 1292-93 (4th Cir.1995) (defendant's suicide attempt after first phase of defendant's trial required court to hold competency hearing not only as to defendant's competence to continue trial but also as to his competence at already concluded first part of trial); United States v. Auen, 846 F.2d at 878; United States v. Renfro, 825 F.2d at 766 (because "statute permits motions to determine competency 'at any time after the commencement of prosecution for an offense and prior to the sentencing of the defendant ..., [t]he request for a hearing to determine [defendant's] competency at trial was, therefore, timely and should have been addressed by the [trial] court."); Etorio v. Bennett, 292 F.Supp.2d at 468; People v. Colon, 128 A.D.2d 422, 423, 512 N.Y.S.2d 809, 810 (1st Dep't 1987).

B. Application of These Legal Principles to Medina's Habeas Claim

Medina's habeas petition, as did his C.P.L. § 440 motion, claims that his prison medical records show that he was incompetent at the time of trial. (E.g., Dkt. No. 1: Pet. ¶ 12(B) ("The prison medical records clearly state the various severe psychiatric problems of the defendant and the regimen of powerful p[s]ychotropic drugs being taken by the defendant that rendered him incapacitated before and during trial and sentencing.”.)

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2004 WL 2088578 (S.D.N.Y.)

*15 The problem with Medina's argument-implicitly recognized in his ineffective assistance claim-is that it is undisputed that this medical evidence was not before the trial judge at the time of trial and/or sentencing, and thus cannot be considered on habeas review. See, e.g., United States v. Gabb, No. 02-1273, 80 Fed. Appx. 142, 144-45, 2003 WL 22533190 at *2 (2d Cir. Nov. 7, 2003) (“[T]he question of competency and reasonable cause to doubt it must focus on the defendant's abilities at the time of trial, not any conduct discovered or analyzed after the fact.”); Harris v. Kuhlmann, 346 F.3d 330, 350 (2d Cir.2003) (“Of course, “[i]t is axiomatic that in reviewing whether this obligation [to order a competency hearing] was properly discharged only evidence before the court at the time its decision was made is pertinent.”); Graham v. Portuondo, Nos. 03-MISC-0066, 01-CV-6911, 2003 WL 23185715 at *7 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 30, 2003) (Weinstein, D.J.) (“In order to find abuse of discretion in failing to order a competency hearing, a reviewer must evaluate the record and evidence available to the trial judge.”); United States v. Berger, 188 F.Supp.2d 307, 325 (S.D.N.Y.2002); Collazo v. United States, 98 Civ. 7059, 1999 WL 335146 at *4-5 (S.D.N.Y. May 26, 1999).

This Court therefore looks to the information that was before the trial judge. As noted above, defense counsel's opinion as to defendant's competence or incompetence is an important factor to consider. (See cases cited at pages 30-31 above.) Here, Medina's trial counsel did not ask the trial court to hold a C.P.L. § 730.30 hearing as to Medina's competency. To the contrary, Medina's trial counsel found Medina to be competent to assist in his defense, as he explained in the affidavit he submitted in response to Medina's C.P.L. § 440 motion:

19. As regards the first question, the Court should be assured that, from the beginning of my representation, I was not unmindful of the fact that Defendant Mr. Medina had psychological problems. From speaking with various family members, I learned of his psychiatric history. I learned that he suffered from a variety of psychiatric maladies. I also learned, however, that while these various maladies may have manifested themselves in different ways, none of these ailments ever led me to believe in any manner whatsoever that Mr. Medina was unable to understand the nature of the proceedings or to assist in his own defense.

21. From the outset, Mr. Medina indicated to me that he fully understood the proceedings that were taking place. He knew why he had been charged. He knew with what he had been charged. He specifically recalled the night of the shooting. And though at various times over the course of my representation, Mr. Medina provided me with a number of different alibis and with a number of possible defenses and/or excuses for his actions, neither his words or action exhibited to me that he lacked, in any way whatsoever, an understanding of his case and of his situation.

*16 22. Likewise, all through the proceedings, and particularly at trial, Mr. Medina attempted to assist in his own defense. As I recall, he was familiar with most of the people who were mentioned in the various police reports provided in discovery. For example, when we discovered that an individual named “Irizarry” was likely to be called a witness against him, Mr. Medina prepared a list of questions for me to ask this person upon cross-examination. I have annexed a copy of Mr. Medina's cross-examination questions for this individual as Exhibit “B”.

23. Your honor should be aware that Mr. Medina was fully cognizant of all of the sentencing possibilities that the case presented. Review of my notes indicates that, at least at one point, Mr. Medina stated to me that he would accept a negotiated disposition which carried with it a term of ten years' incarceration. When the prosecutor would not agree, however, we did not broach the subject again.

24. What was evident, at least to my untrained eye, was that Mr. Medina had no sense of the gravity of the crime. Upon reflection brought on by my review of my file in preparation of the affirmation, I recall that Mr. Medina never referred to the victim of the crime as anything other than “the Cuban,” or “the Old Cuban.” His attitude always seemed to be, at least in my discussions with him, that neither the police nor the prosecutors were as smart as he was.

25. During my representation of Mr. Medina, I was not unmindful, however, that Mr. Medina did possess some psychiatric problems. I knew of some of his history through speaking with him as well as certain friends and family members. Indeed, at one point, I was considering some type of “diminished capacity” defense. Early on in the case, I consulted with a psychiatrist, Dr. Sanford Drab. After Dr. Drab's review of the case, I made the decision to proceed with a more straightforward defense.

26. The Court should note, however, that at no time during my meetings with Mr. Medina prior to or during trial, did he appear to me to be in a “subdued torpor” (Memorandum submitted in support of Defendant's 440.10 Motion, page 6). Nor do I recall him ever appearing to be in a “heavily medicated and sedated state” (memorandum, page 6), or a “stupefied state” (Memorandum, page 7).

(1/24/03 Affidavit of Medina's trial counsel, Anthony R. Dellicarri, ¶¶ 19-26, attached as Ex. 1 to 3/5/03 Aff. of A.D.A. Zaharah R. Markoe in Opposition to Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion.) See, e.g., Graham v. Portuondo, Nos. 03-MISC-0066, 01-CV-6911, 2003 WL 23185715 at *7 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 30, 2003) (Weinstein, D.J.); Collazo v. United States, 98 Civ. 7059, 1999 WL 335146 at *4-5 (S.D.N.Y. May 26, 1999).

The trial judge nevertheless would have had a duty to sua sponte order a competency examination of Medina, if Medina's demeanor or other evidence raised doubt as to his competence. (See cases cited at pages 26-27 above.) The fact that defense counsel did not request such a hearing is one factor. Justice Fisch made clear in denying Medina's C.P.L. § 440 motion that he had no reason to question Medina's competency:

*17 The record, in the instant case, is devoid of any information that would have suggested to this Court that the defendant was not fit to proceed. In fact, the record demonstrates the contrary, and reveals many instances of the defendant's obvious participation in the proceedings and awareness of what was taking place....

In the instant case, the defendant's purported mental state was never brought to the attention, nor obviously apparent to the trial Court, thus failing to raise a doubt regarding the defendant's competence. The defendant did not manifest by words or actions any reason for this Court to believe nor even suspect that he was not competent to stand trial. The defendant's appearance was that of an active, rational participant throughout his entire trial, in full comprehension of the proceedings. He executed a written waiver of his right to be present during sidebar conferences, consulted with his attorney regarding jury selection and actions to be taken with regard to specific jurors. He prepared written questions for his attorney to use during cross examination, consulted with his attorney regarding the introduction of evidence during trial and had his attorney inform the court of his personal needs during trial. All these actions demonstrated to the Court that the defendant understood the nature of the proceedings and was able to assist in his defense. The Court had no reasonable grounds to believe the defendant was not competent to stand trial.

(10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order at 3.) See, e.g., Collazo v. United States, 1999 WL 335146 at *4 (“A court's determination that a defendant is competent may be based on ... the court's own observations of the defendant, even where there is evidence of the defendant's low intelligence, prior history of heavy drug use, lapses of memory, and unresponsiveness.”); People v. Tortorici, 92 N.Y.2d 757, 765, 686 N.Y.S.2d 346, 350 (1999) (A “defendant's history of psychiatric illness does not in itself call into question defendant's competence to stand trial.”).

As noted above, deference is owed to the trial court's determination based on observation of the defendant at the time of trial. (See cases cited at pages 30-31 above.) The record is clear-and essentially Medina does not claim otherwise-that there was no information before the trial judge at the time of trial and/or sentencing that would have required him to order a competency hearing for Medina. See, e.g., United States v. Gabb, No. 02-1273, 80 Fed. Appx. 142, 145-46, 2003 WL 22533190 at *2-3 (2d Cir. Nov. 7, 2003); Harris v. Kuhlmann, 346 F.3d 330, 355 (2d Cir.2003); *United States v. While Medina's habeas petition, as did his C.P.L. § 440 motion, relies on a "chronology" based on his medical records (Dkt. No. 1: Farrell Aff. ¶ 7; Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion, Farrell Aff. ¶ 9), the medical records were obtained only after the trial, via a F.O.I.L. request. (See Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion Ex. 1: Medina 9/16/02 Aff. ¶¶ 2-3.) A review of the medical records, moreover, reveals assessments that Medina was alert, cooperative and fully oriented, with "logical," "relevant" and "goal directed" thought processes. ^{FN34} Medina's habeas petition, like his C.P.L. § 440 motion, also relies on an affidavit from Dr. Richard Dudley, who did not examine Medina but reviewed Medina's medical records. (Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion Ex. 2: Dudley 9/30/02 Aff. ¶ 5.) Dr. Dudley does not come to any conclusion with a reasonable degree of medical (psychiatric) certainty. Rather, his opinion is that certain things were "likely" to or "could have" affected Medina. (See Dudley Aff. ¶¶ 6, 9.) This Court finds Justice Fisch's analysis persuasive:

^{FN34}. E.g., Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion, Medical Records, Ex. B (3/3/97 at p. 413-18), Ex. C (2/15/97 at p. 430-33), Ex. I (2/24/98 at p. 502-09), Ex. N (1/30/99 at p. 574 (Medina alert, making progress and looking to the future)), Ex. N (2/17/99 at p. 580 (Medina alert and cooperative, stable in general population housing)), Ex. O (3/16/99 at p. 587 (Medina "clinically & mentally stable")), Ex. V (5/99 to 6/1/99 at p. 615-20 (shortly after sentencing, Medina is "stable on medication," "speech clear & coherent. Judgment & impulse control adequate.")).

*18 Another argument proffered by the defendant is that he was so heavily medicated he was unable to understand the nature of the proceedings. To support this claim, defendant has attached medical records as well as an affidavit from Dr. Richard G. Dudley regarding his mental state. While a review of the medical records does indicate that the defendant was medicated at various times, Dr. Dudley never personally examined nor observed the defendant in this medicated condition. Dr. Dudley's assessment of the defendant's mental state, at the time of the trial, is based solely on a review of medical records. Such records contain many entries, on various dates, in the months immediately prior to the hearing and trial where the observation notes reveal the following: Defendant was alert, his speech was "clean and coherent," he had "good eye contact," and no "delusions." On March 16, 1999, shortly before the pre-trial hearings began, the medical records indicate the defendant "appeared to be clinically and mentally stable and not distressed." While there are requests for medication by the defendant during the time period of these observations, at most they refer to the defendant being anxious and depressed but not mentally incompetent. All of these observation notes were made by medical professionals who had direct contact with the defendant, thus providing them the best opportunity to assess his medical condition.... The defendant, despite the medication, assisted in his defense.

(10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order at 5-6.) See, e.g., United States v. Gabb, 2003 WL 22533190 at *3 ("The district court's contemporaneous assessment of the appellant's competence can, within the discretion afforded to it, outweigh the reliability of a report produced by a psychiatrist who first met with the appellant seven months after conviction, such that the district court could find no reasonable cause to trigger the hearing requirement of § 4241."); United States v. Zelker, 355 F.Supp. 1002, 1008 (S.D.N.Y.1972) (The court-appointed psychiatrist's "examination of petitioner consisted of a review of petitioner's past history, the court records, and interviews with petitioner years after the events in question took place. He admitted that the Bellevue finding of 'no psychosis' was not consistent with his own findings.... It seems clear that petitioner was fit to stand trial ..."), aff'd, 474 F.2d 1336 (2d Cir.1973). In addition, the Court risks repetition but notes that neither the medical records nor Dr. Dudley's affidavit were presented to the trial judge (or known to Medina's trial counsel) at the time of trial and sentencing. Thus, even if Dr. Dudley's analysis of the medical records were correct, since the information was not presented to the trial judge before (or during) trial, the trial judge was not required to order a competency hearing.

Medina also argues that he was incompetent at the time of his sentencing on May 14, 1999, because he was on both Thorazine and Zyprexa, which in combination (according to Dr. Dudley) act as sedatives. (See Dkt. No. 1: Farrell Aff. at 24; see also Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion Ex. 2:

Dudley Aff. ¶ 9.) Medina cites Riggins v. Nevada, 504 U.S. 127, 112 S.Ct. 1810 (1992), in making his argument. (Dkt. No. 1: Farrell Aff. at 24-25.) As Justice Kennedy noted in his concurring opinion in Riggins:

*19 [S]erious prejudice could result if medication inhibits the defendant's capacity to react and respond to the proceedings and to demonstrate remorse or compassion. The prejudice can be acute during the sentencing phase of the proceedings, when the sentencer must attempt to know the heart and mind of the offender and judge his character.

Riggins v. Nevada, 504 U.S. at 143-44, 112 S.Ct. at 1819 (Kennedy, J., concurring). “Certainly, the improper administration of psychiatric medicine can render an individual temporarily incompetent.” United States v. Quintieri, 306 F.3d 1217, 1233 (2d Cir.2002). Medina points to the fact that at sentencing, the judge noted that Medina made “no demonstration to either the Probation Department ... or a statement to me to make any type of contrition or any remorse for what happened.” (Dkt. No. 1: Farrell Aff. at 24, quoting Sentencing Transcript at 20, which has not been provided to the Court.) In this case, however, there was no evidence before Justice Fisch at the time of Medina's sentencing to indicate that Medina was sedated by medication or otherwise incompetent. (Indeed, Medina's lack of expression of remorse is also consistent with his continued claim of innocence.) See, e.g., United States v. Quintieri, 306 F.3d at 1233-34 (Assurances by defense counsel, “combined with the court's own observations, overcome any reasonable doubt as to the defendant's competence that may have been raised by his statement that he felt dizzy” at time of sentencing.); Chichakly v. United States, 926 F.2d 624, 631-32 (7th Cir.1991) (Despite defendant's allegations that he was incompetent due to psychiatric medications, “[t]here is certainly no need to conduct a competency hearing when there is no evidence before the Court of incompetency and when the defense attorney failed to request one and neither the prosecuting attorney nor the judge saw a need for one.”); Lopez v. Walker, 239 F.Supp.2d 368, 374 (S.D.N.Y.2003) (Defendant's “pre-sentence report made reference to his prior suicide attempts, hospitalization, and use of the drug Sinequan.” However, “in spite of the information contained” in the report, the court was not required to make a further inquiry into defendant's competency since the defendant presented himself as “coherent and rational, as well as an active participant in his own case.”); Thomas v. Senkowski, 968 F.Supp. 953, 956 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (Petitioner found fully competent to plead guilty although under the influence of heavy anti-psychotic drugs at the time.).

Finally, this Court must review Justice Fisch's determination under the deferential AEDPA review standard. The Court cannot say that Justice Fisch's determination that there was no evidence requiring him to sua sponte order a competency hearing was an “unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding,” as required by the AEDPA, 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2), nor an unreasonable application of clearly established Supreme Court precedent, 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1). See, e.g., Harris v. Kuhlmann, 346 F.3d 330, 352, 355 (2d Cir.2003) (“Considering all of the evidence before the state trial court at the time of the October 17, 1984 hearing, we cannot conclude that it was objectively unreasonable for the court to have denied Harris's motion for a competence hearing.”); Armstrong v. Duncan, 03 Civ. 930, 2003 WL 22339490 at *9 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 14, 2003) (“ ‘The determination of whether reasonable doubt exists as to a defendant's fitness to stand trial ... has generally been held to be an issue of fact entitled to deference by a federal habeas corpus court.’ ... In light of the trial court's ‘superior opportunity’ to observe the Petitioner in court, ... the contents of the psychiatric reports, and defense counsel's own failure to raise concerns about Petitioner's competency, this Court cannot say that the state court unreasonably applied federal law in determining that Petitioner was fit to stand trial.”). Lopez v. Walker, 239 F.Supp.2d at 375 (“The determination of competency is an issue of fact, entitled to deference upon federal habeas review.”); Bisnett v. Kelly, 221 F.Supp.2d 373, 388 (E.D.N.Y.2002) (Raggi, D.J.); see also cases cited at pages 29-31 above.

*20 Accordingly, Medina's habeas claim that he was denied due process because he was not competent at the time of trial and sentencing (Pet.¶ 12(B)) should be DENIED.

III. MEDINA'S INEFFECTIVE ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL CLAIMS SHOULD BE DENIED

1. Strickland and Trial Counsel

In Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052 (1984), the Supreme Court announced a two-part test to determine if counsel's assistance was ineffective: "First, the defendant must show that counsel's performance was deficient. This requires showing that counsel made errors so serious that counsel was not functioning as the 'counsel' guaranteed the defendant by the Sixth Amendment." Id. at 687, 104 S.Ct. at 2064; accord, e.g., Wiggins v. Smith, 123 S.Ct. 2527, 2535 (2003). This performance is to be judged by an objective standard of reasonableness. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 688, 104 S.Ct. at 2064. ^{FN36}

^{FN36}. Accord, e.g., Wiggins v. Smith, 123 S.Ct. at 2535; Bell v. Cone, 535 U.S. 685, 695, 122 S.Ct. 1843, 1850 (2002).

Judicial scrutiny of counsel's performance must be highly deferential. It is all too tempting for a defendant to second-guess counsel's assistance after conviction.... A fair assessment of attorney performance requires that every effort be made to eliminate the distorting effects of hindsight, to reconstruct the circumstances of counsel's challenged conduct, and to evaluate the conduct from counsel's perspective at the time.... [A] court must indulge a strong presumption that counsel's conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance; that is, the defendant must overcome the presumption that, under the circumstances, the challenged action "might be considered sound trial strategy."

Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 689, 104 S.Ct. at 2065 (citation omitted).^{FN37}

FN37. Accord, e.g., Bell v. Cone, 535 U.S. at 698, 122 S.Ct. at 1852; Aparicio v. Artuz, 269 F.3d 78, 95 (2d Cir.2001); Sellan v. Kuhlman, 261 F.3d 303, 315 (2d Cir.2001).

Second, the defendant must show prejudice from counsel's performance. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 687, 104 S.Ct. at 2064. The "question is whether there is a reasonable probability that, absent the errors, the fact finder would have had a reasonable doubt respecting guilt." Id. at 695, 104 S.Ct. at 2068-69. Put another way, the "defendant must show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different." Id. at 694, 104 S.Ct. at 2068.^{FN38}

FN38. See also, e.g., Wiggins v. Smith, 123 S.Ct. at 2542; Bell v. Cone, 535 U.S. at 695, 122 S.Ct. at 1850; Aparicio v. Artuz, 269 F.3d at 95; Sellan v. Kuhlman, 261 F.3d at 315; DeLuca v. Lord, 77 F.3d 578, 584 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 824, 117 S.Ct. 83 (1996).

"[A] reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome." Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 694, 104 S.Ct. at 2068; accord, e.g., Wiggins v. Smith, 123 S.Ct. at 2542. The phrase "reasonable probability," despite its language, should not be confused with "probable" or "more likely than not." Strickler v. Greene, 527 U.S. 263, 289-91, 119 S.Ct. 1936, 1952-53 (1999); Kyles v. Whitley, 514

U.S. 419, 434, 115 S.Ct. 1555, 1565-66 (1995); Nix v. Whiteside, 475 U.S. 157, 175, 106 S.Ct. 988, 998 (1986) ("a defendant need not establish that the attorney's deficient performance more likely than not altered the outcome in order to establish prejudice under Strickland"); Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 694, 104 S.Ct. at 2068 ("The result of a proceeding can be rendered unreliable, and hence the proceeding itself unfair, even if the errors of counsel cannot be shown by a preponderance of the evidence to have determined the outcome."). Rather, the phrase "reasonable probability" seems to describe a fairly low standard of probability, albeit somewhat more likely than a "reasonable possibility." Strickler v. Greene, 527 U.S. at 291, 119 S.Ct. at 1953; cf. id. at 297-301, 119 S.Ct. at 1955-58 (Souter, J., concurring & dissenting) (arguing that any difference between "reasonable probability" and "reasonable possibility" is "slight").

The Supreme Court has counseled that these principles "do not establish mechanical rules." Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 696, 104 S.Ct. at 2069. The focus of the inquiry should be on the fundamental fairness of the trial and whether, despite the strong presumption of reliability, the result is unreliable because of a breakdown of the adversarial process. Id.

Any counsel errors must be considered in the "aggregate" rather than in isolation, as the Supreme Court has directed courts "to look at the 'totality of the evidence before the judge or jury.'" Lindstadt v. Keane, 239 F.3d 191, 199 (2d Cir.2001) (quoting Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 695-96, 104 S.Ct. at 2069); accord, e.g., Rodriguez v. Hoke, 928 F.2d 534, 538 (2d Cir.1991).

*21 The Supreme Court also made clear that "there is no reason for a court deciding an ineffective assistance claim ... to address both components of the inquiry if the defendant makes an insufficient showing on one." Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 697, 104 S.Ct. at 2069.^{FN39}

FN39. Accord, e.g., Smith v. Robbins, 528 U.S. 259, 286 n. 14, 120 S.Ct. 746, 764 n. 14 (2000).

In addition, the Supreme Court has counseled that “strategic choices made after thorough investigation of law and facts relevant to plausible options are virtually unchallengeable; and strategic choices made after less than complete investigation are reasonable precisely to the extent that reasonable professional judgments support the limitations on investigation.... In any ineffectiveness case, a particular decision not to investigate must be directly assessed for reasonableness in all the circumstances, applying a heavy measure of deference to counsel’s judgments.” Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 690-91, 104 S.Ct. at 2066.^{FN40}

FN40. See also, e.g., Yarborough v. Gentry, 124 S.Ct. 1, 5-6 (2003); Engle v. Isaac, 456 U.S. 107, 134, 102 S.Ct. 1558, 1575 (1982) (“We have long recognized ... that the Constitution guarantees criminal defendants only a fair trial and a competent attorney. It does not insure that defense counsel will recognize and raise every conceivable constitutional claim.”); Jackson v. Leonardo, 162 F.3d 81, 85 (2d Cir.1998) (“In reviewing Strickland claims, courts are instructed to ‘indulge a strong presumption that counsel’s conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance’ and that counsel’s conduct was not the result of error but derived instead from trial strategy. We are also instructed, when reviewing decisions by counsel, not to ‘second-guess reasonable professional judgments and impose on ... counsel a duty to raise every ‘colorable’ claim’ on appeal.”) (citations omitted); Mayo v. Henderson, 13 F.3d 528, 533 (2d Cir.) (a reviewing court “may not use hindsight to second-guess [counsel’s] strategy choices”), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 820, 115 S.Ct. 81 (1994).

As the Second Circuit noted: “The Strickland standard is rigorous, and the great majority of habeas petitions that allege constitutionally ineffective counsel founder on that standard.” Lindstadt v. Keane, 239 F.3d at 199.

2. Strickland and the AEDPA Review Standard

For purposes of this Court’s AEDPA analysis, “the Strickland standard ... is the relevant ‘clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States.’” Aparicio v. Artuz, 269 F.3d at 95 & n. 8 (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1)).^{FN41} “For AEDPA purposes, a petitioner is not required to further demonstrate that his particular theory of ineffective assistance of counsel is also ‘clearly established.’” Aparicio v. Artuz, 269 F.3d at 95 n. 8. “For [petitioner] to succeed, however, he must do more than show that he would have satisfied Strickland’s test if his claim were being analyzed in the first instance, because under § 2254(d)(1), it is not enough to convince a federal habeas court that, in its independent judgment, the state-court decision applied Strickland incorrectly.... Rather, he must show that the [First Department] applied Strickland to the facts of his case in an objectively unreasonable manner.” Bell v. Cone, 535 U.S. at 698-99, 122 S.Ct. at 1852; see also Yarborough v. Gentry, 124 S.Ct. 1, 4 (2003).

FN41. See also, e.g., Wiggins v. Smith, 123 S.Ct. 2527, 2535 (2003); Bell v. Cone, 535 U.S. 685, 698, 122 S.Ct. 1843, 1852 (2002); Sellan v. Kuhlman, 261 F.3d at 315.

B. Medina’s Ineffective Trial Counsel Claims Should Be Denied

Medina asserts that his trial counsel erred by failing to: (1) request a C.P.L. § 730.20 competency hearing; (2) investigate Medina’s medical and psychiatric history, (3) retain a private investigator, (4) interview a potentially exculpatory witness, and (5) properly impeach the prosecution’s key witness, Cepero. (Dkt. No. 1: Pet. ¶ 12(A); see Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 11-22.)

In denying Medina’s C.P.L. § 440 motion, Justice Fisch stated:

The defendant has failed to establish the representation he received throughout the trial was so deficient that his attorney was not functioning within the acceptable professional standards required for counsel. The Court is hard pressed to find the trial strategy of [defense counsel] Mr. Dellicarri deficient when the defendant was acquitted of the top charge of Murder in the Second Degree and found guilty of the lesser charge of Manslaughter in the First Degree. Although the Court is mindful of the defendant's argument that it is the combination of errors that rise to the level of ineffectiveness, based on the trial record and the factual allegations contained in this motion, the defendant has not met his burden. It is apparent from the affidavit of Mr. Dellicarri, a seasoned practitioner, with over twenty years of criminal trial experience, as well as from the observations of this Court that the defendant was an active participant in his defense. He participated both in and out of Court, never presenting his attorney or this Court reason or pause to question his mental state. Mr. Dellicarri engaged in vigorous cross examination of the main prosecution witness which likely played a role in the defendant's acquittal on the top charge of Murder in the Second Degree. Mr. Dellicarri also made a strategic decision not to call a witness to testify to the mere fact that she did not hear a gunshot since there was no disputed issue regarding the cause of death. The Court will not confuse the strategic trial decisions made by Mr. Dellicarri, as a zealous advocate on behalf of the defendant, with deficient representation. A review of the evidence, the law and the circumstances of the case at the time of representation, clearly compels the finding that defendant received meaningful representation.

*22 (10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order at 7-8; see also id. at 4-7.) FN42

FN42. In addition to the trial court's description of Dellicarri as a "zealous advocate," Medina sent Dellicarri a letter in order to "tell [Delicarri] thanks [Medina] felt [he] was represented perfect ." (3/5/03 A.D.A. Markoe Aff. in Opp. to Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion, Ex. 1: Dellicarri Aff. Ex. A: Letter from Medina.) Medina also wrote to Delicarri, "your [sic] a wonderful lawyer" and "I think your [sic] the best." (Id.)

For the reasons discussed below, Medina's ineffective assistance of trial counsel claim should be DENIED.

1. Defense Counsel's Alleged Failure to Request a Competency Hearing and Investigate Medina's Medical and Psychiatric History

Medina asserts that his trial counsel, Dellicarri, "failed to be aware of [Medina's] medical and psychological distress." (Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 18.) Specifically, Medina claims that:

- a. Defense counsel told [Medina] to pay attention several times during the pretrial hearing and trial. [Medina] informed defense counsel that [he] could not pay attention and all [he] wanted to do was sleep.
- b. Defense counsel never requested information from [Medina] concerning [his] ongoing medical or psychiatric treatment during the course of trial.
- c. Defense counsel never investigated [Medina's] medical and psychiatric history prior to incarceration.
- d. Defense counsel never requested a psychiatric exam to determine whether [Medina] had a mental disease or defect excluding fitness to proceed.

(Medina C.P.L. § 440 Aff. ¶ 6.) However, defense counsel Dellicarri's affidavit in opposition to Medina's C.P.L. § 440 motion stated that he was aware of Medina's "psychological problems" and "psychiatric history" through conversations with "various family members." (3/5/03 A.D.A. Markoe Aff. in Opp. to C.P.L. § 440 Motion, Ex. 1: Dellicarri Aff. ¶¶ 19, 25.) After considering raising a "diminished capacity" defense and consulting a psychiatrist in this regard, Dellicarri determined that Medina's mental health problems did not rise to the level of incompetency or diminished capacity. (Dellicarri Aff. ¶¶ 19, 25.) Dellicarri stated that "none of these [psychiatric] ailments ever led [him] to believe in any manner whatsoever that Mr. Medina was unable to understand the nature of the proceedings or to assist in his own defense.... From the outset, Mr. Medina indicated to [Dellicarri] that he fully understood the proceedings that were taking place.... Likewise, all through the proceedings, and particularly at trial, Mr. Medina attempted to assist in his own defense.” (Dellicarri Aff. ¶¶ 19, 21, 22.)

According to Justice Fisch:

Mr. Dellicarri asserts that [Medina] never indicated he did not understand the proceedings, and indeed made efforts to assist in his defense, both prior to, and during trial. [Medina] suggested several alibis to be used for his defense, participated in plea negotiations, and prepared cross examination questions for a witness. During the trial, [Medina's] appearance never gave defense counsel cause for concern. Counsel refutes the claims in [Medina's] motion that [Medina] was in a ‘subdued torpor’ or in a ‘heavily medicated or sedated state,’ during trial.

(10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order at 5.) Since Dellicarri was able to communicate with Medina and Dellicarri had no reason to suspect that Medina's mental disease rose to the level of incompetence, it was not unreasonable for Dellicarri to not request a competency hearing. See, e.g., Etorio v. Bennett, 292 F.Supp.2d 456, 472 (E.D.N.Y.2003) (Weinstein, D.J.) (defendant “did not act unusually during the proceedings and he did nothing either volitionally or involuntarily to alert his lawyer to the fact that he was not competent.”); Dennis v. Turner, 729 F.Supp. 15, 17 (S.D.N.Y.1990) (“Given the absence of any evidence indicating Dennis' competency was in doubt at the time of trial, counsel for Dennis obviously will not be presumed to have represented Dennis deficiently in failing to request a competency hearing.”). As discussed in Point II.B above, Medina's arguments based on the medical records and Dr. Dudley's affidavit must be rejected because defense counsel did not have that information, and this Court agrees with Justice Fisch that based on defense counsel's knowledge, he was not ineffective for not investigating Medina's psychological problems more than he did. Moreover, even if this Court would rule otherwise if it had been the C.P.L. § 440 court (which it would not), under the deferential AEDPA review standard, this portion of Medina's ineffective assistance of counsel claim should be DENIED.

2. Counsel's Alleged Failure to Retain a Private Investigator and Properly Investigate

*23 Medina claims that his trial counsel erred by failing to hire a private investigator to measure the distance between Cepero and 932 Intervale Avenue on the night of the incident, which Medina alleges would have cast doubt upon Cepero's ability to see Medina leave the club with a gun. (Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 13-15.)

Medina relies on Thomas v. Kuhlman, 255 F.Supp.2d 99 (E.D.N.Y.2003) (Weinstein, D.J.), to support his claim that Dellicarri should have pursued a more in depth investigation in a one-witness homicide. (See Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 12-13.) That case is distinguishable. In Thomas v. Kuhlman, trial counsel failed to investigate the crime scene where a key witness testified that she saw the petitioner standing on a fire escape of the murder victim's building shortly before the victim was killed. Thomas v. Kuhlman, 255 F.Supp.2d at 101. It was later undisputedly determined that “it was physically impossible for the witness to have seen defendant at the victim's window, since ... [it] was not visible from her vantage point.” Id. Judge Weinstein found that “under the circumstances of [that] case,” where the defendant was “[c]harged with second-degree murder ... and the case against him hinged crucially on the testimony of one eyewitness [t]hat circumstance alone should have been enough to put counsel on notice that he had an obligation to see for himself what the crime scene looked like.” Id. at 110. In Thomas, “[i]f defense counsel had made a proper investigation prior to trial ... he would have been able to deal significant blows to the prosecution's case....” Id. at 109.

Medina's case is clearly distinguished from Thomas v. Kuhlman because defense counsel Dellicarri thoroughly examined the issue of Cepero's distance from the social club during trial and established through cross-examination of Cepero and the police officers that Cepero was two or three times as far away from the social club as he claimed he was. (See pages 9-10 above.) During Cepero's cross-examination, Dellicarri walked to the back of the courtroom in order to ascertain whether he was standing as far away from Cepero as Medina was on the night of the incident. (See pages 9-10 above.) Cepero responded that his distance from Medina on that night was about “half a courtroom” more. (See page 10 above.) In addition to questioning Cepero about how far he was standing from the entrance of 932 Intervale Avenue, Dellicarri also asked Detective McKeon and Officer

(Cite as: 2004 WL 2088578 (S.D.N.Y.))

Santos to approximate this distance. Detective McKeon testified that the distance was about 109 feet. (See page 10 n. 11 above.) Even assuming that Officer Santos had meant to say feet instead of yards during his cross-examination testimony, he approximated Cepero's distance from the social club at 160 feet. (See page 10 above.) Medina claims that further investigation proved that the actual distance from the club's front door to the parking lot fence was 157.5 feet and thus to where Cepero was standing is "at least 160 feet away from the club's front door." (Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion Ex. 7: Giretti Aff. ¶¶ 5-6.) The distance which the investigation would have determined, therefore, is not materially different from Officer Santos' testimony of 160 feet, which Dellicarri established on cross-examination and focused on during his closing argument. (See pages 9-10 above.)^{FN43} In short, defense counsel developed at trial through cross-examination the very fact-Cepero's distance of 160 feet from the social club-that Medina claims he was ineffective for not hiring an investigator to establish. Dellicarri is not ineffective merely because the jury apparently chose to credit Cepero's testimony, despite impeachment as to his distance from the social club's front door.

^{FN43} Indeed, the fact that an experienced lawyer like Dellicarri asked these questions would seem to indicate that, unlike the lawyer in Thomas v. Kuhlman, Dellicarri had himself visited the scene of the crime.

*24 In addition, Medina has not met Strickland's second, prejudice prong (see pages 43-44 above), that is, he has not shown that "but for the [supposed] deficiency, the likely outcome of the proceeding would have been different." See, e.g., United States v. Miceli, No. 00-1611, 7 Fed. Appx. 131, 133, 2001 WL 363504 at *1 (2d Cir. Apr. 12, 2001); Bingham v. Duncan, 01 Civ. 1371, 2003 WL 21360084 at *4 (S.D.N.Y. June 12, 2003) (based on review of the record the court found that "trial counsel's failure to do investigative work ... do [es] not establish that the result of the proceedings would have been different.").

3. Counsel's Alleged Failure to Call a Potentially Exculpatory Witness

Medina claims that his trial counsel should have called as a trial witness Mirca Martinez,^{FN44} who was present in her nearby hair salon at the time of the incident. (Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 15.) According to an interview conducted by the police on May 5, 1996, Martinez stated that "[she] did not hear a gunshot. [She] did see more than twenty men and women come running out of the place that night. The music that they play in the Club is very loud. It's loud enough so that [she] would not hear a gunshot." (Medina C.P.L. § 440 Motion Ex. 7: Police Report of Martinez Interview.)

^{FN44} While Medina refers to this individual as Ms. Martinez (see Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 15), Justice Fisch refers to her as Ms. Torres (see 10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order at 7).

Courts in this Circuit have made clear that "[t]he decision whether to call any witnesses on behalf of the defendant, and if so which witnesses to call, is a tactical decision of the sort engaged in by defense attorneys in almost every trial." United States v. Nersesian, 824 F.2d 1294, 1321 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 958, 108 S.Ct. 357 (1987);^{FN45} see, e.g., United States v. DeJesus, No. 01-1479, 57 Fed. Appx. 474, 478, 2003 WL 193736 at *3 (2d Cir. Jan. 28, 2003) ("A trial counsel's 'decision whether to call any witnesses on behalf of the defendant, and if so which witnesses to call, is a tactical decision of the sort engaged in by defense attorneys in almost every trial.' United States v. Smith, 198 F.3d 377, 386 (2d Cir.1999). Because of this inherently tactical nature, the decision not to call a particular witness generally should not be disturbed." Counsel's decision not to call a character witness was grounded in strategy and not deficient, "even though [defendant] requested that she do so and provided her with contact information for potential witnesses."), cert. denied, 123 S.Ct. 2110 (2003).^{FN46}

More importantly, “[g]enerally, the decision whether to pursue a particular defense is a tactical choice which does not rise to the level of a constitutional violation.... [T]he habeas court ‘will not second-guess trial strategy simply because the chosen strategy has failed ...,’ especially where the petitioner has failed to identify any specific evidence or testimony that would have helped his case if presented at trial.” *Jones v. 25 In this case, Medina alleges that Martinez’ testimony would have impeached the credibility of Cepero’s testimony. (Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 15.) According to Medina, if Martinez was unable to hear the gunshot, the jury might not believe that Cepero was able to hear the shot from a further distance away. (Medina Br. at 15.) Medina claims that this would be of particular importance because Cepero testified that the reason he had “looked up” and seen Medina hand off the gun was because he had heard a gunshot. (Dkt. No. 1: Farrell Aff. ¶ 5.) In addition, Medina states that his trial counsel should have called

Martinez as a witness in order to determine whether Medina was one of the people she witnessed run past the store, and if so, whether or not he was carrying anything “shiny.” (Medina Br. at 15.) FN47

FN47. Of course, since the answers to these questions were not contained in the police interview statement, it would have been extremely risky-perhaps ineffective-for defense counsel to blindly ask these questions at trial. This itself was another good reason not to call Martinez as a defense witness.

Dellicarri stated that since the parties did not dispute the fact that Cardenas was killed by a bullet wound, Martinez’s testimony, that she did not hear a gunshot, would not have discredited Cepero’s testimony, but is a “red herring.” (3/5/03 A.D.A. Markoe Aff. in Opp. to C.P.L. § 440 Motion Ex. 1: Dellicarri Aff. ¶ 32.) As Justice Fisch determined, “[t]he fact that [Martinez] may not have heard a shot does not necessarily establish that a shot was not fired or heard by another witness. It can hardly be argued that this testimony presents a strong probability that the outcome of the trial would have changed.” (10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order at 7.) This is a classic issue of trial strategy and Dellicarri was not ineffective in his choice of strategy. Moreover, even assuming arguendo that Medina satisfied the first Strickland prong, the Court agrees with Justice Fisch that Medina has not shown a “reasonable probability” that Martinez’s testimony concerning her inability to hear the shot would have changed the result of trial, and thus Medina has not satisfied the second Strickland prong, prejudice. See, e.g., Mills v. Scully, 826 F.2d 1192, 1197 (2d Cir.1987) (finding it was “sound trial strategy” and not “ineffective assistance of counsel” for trial counsel to forego use of contradictory testimony to impeach the trial testimony of the only eye witness to the shooting with which the defendant was charged.).

4. Counsel’s Alleged Failure to Properly Impeach Cepero

Medina claims that Dellicarri did not properly impeach Cepero regarding statements Cepero had made during trial. (Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 15-18.) Specifically, Medina claims that when Cepero incorrectly described

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2004 WL 2088578 (S.D.N.Y.)
(Cite as: 2004 WL 2088578 (S.D.N.Y.))

Medina as being “in his thirties,” Dellicarri should have more vigorously questioned him about this statement. (Medina Br. at 17.) In addition, Medina has a large tattoo prominently displayed across his back (Medina Br. at 16; see also Medina § 440 Aff. ¶ 10), but Cepero stated in a pre-trial statement that Medina did not have any tattoos. (Medina § 440 Motion Att.: Cepero Stmt. at 20; Medina Br. at 16.) Medina claims that the jury should have been made aware of this information and that Dellicarri should not have objected to the question posed by the Assistant District Attorney asking whether Cepero had ever seen Medina without clothing. (Medina Br. at 16.)

26 Medina has failed to establish that Cepero's statements regarding Medina's age and tattoos were material since Cepero had known Medina for a year prior to the incident. Cepero's failure to properly guess Medina's age or notice his tattoos does not suggest that Cepero could not recognize Medina, who he had known for a year.^{FN48} Moreover, it was a question of trial strategy as to how best to attack Cepero's ability to identify Medina; defense counsel focused on Cepero's distance, that he was high on crack and that he testified to obtain a favorable deal for himself,^{FN49} rather than on discrepancies about Medina's age or whether he had a tattoo (the latter being an issue on which Cepero did not testify at trial). Such issues of trial strategy are left to trial counsel and are not to be Monday morning quarterbacked under Strickland. See, e.g., United States v. Jennings, 01 Cr. 0164, 2002 WL 1402090 at *4 (S.D.N.Y. June 28, 2002) (“Many, if not all, of [defendant's ineffective assistance] claims are latter day determinations that a different trial strategy might have been more effective, also known as Monday morning quarterbacking.”), aff'd, No. 02-1411, 63 Fed. Appx. 35, 2003 WL 21105364 (2d Cir. May 14, 2003), cert. denied, 124 S.Ct. 2835 (2004); Yanez v. Keane, 16 F.Supp.2d 364, 375 (S.D.N.Y.1998) (Haight, D.J. & Peck, M.J.) Hanslmaier*, 982 F.Supp. 279, 286-87 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (Sprizzo, D.J. & Peck, M.J.) (Petitioner's “habeas claim is based on an after-the-fact, Monday-morning quarterback approach.”).

^{FN48} Cf., e.g., Lee v. Keane, No. 01-2136, 50 Fed. Appx. 497, 499, 2002 WL 31520115 at *2 (2d Cir. Nov. 13, 2002) (The witness' “description of [petitioner] on the night of the shooting, however, was unequivocal-she knew [petitioner] from the neighborhood and had seen him in her building.... [S]he had the opportunity to observe him on numerous occasions at a distance of ten to twelve feet. At the lineup, [the witness] was able to identify [petitioner] within seconds. Finally, and most significantly, on the night of the shooting, she was able to identify Lee to the police, by name.”), cert. denied, 124 S.Ct. 191 (2003); United States v. Ming, 02 Cr. 0596, 2002 WL 1949227 at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 22, 2002) (“[T]he witness knew the defendant from prior encounters and identified him to the government by one of his aliases prior to the identification procedure, thus raising substantial doubt as to whether any suggestiveness of the procedure was undue.”); Poo v. Hood, 89 Civ. 7874, 1992 WL 30617 at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 12, 1992) (“That testimony could not be dismissed as a matter of mistaken identity because the witness clearly knew the defendant well and had seen him at close quarters in an elevator.”).

^{FN49} Medina concedes that “[t]here is no question that [defense] counsel sought to impeach Cepero's credibility concerning his criminal record and potential motive to ... curry favor for his own case.” (Medina Br. at 15.)

Defense counsel Dellicarri vigorously and thoroughly pointed out a number of inconsistent statements made by Cepero throughout the course of trial. (See pages 8-9 above.) As stated by Justice Fisch:

A review of the trial record demonstrates that Cepero was vigorously cross examined in all relevant and material areas including his ability to see, his altered state of mind and his motivation for testifying. Mr. Dellicarri's cross-examination established testimonial inconsistencies bearing on the credibility of witnesses, which were then for the jury to consider.

(10/22/03 Justice Fisch Order at 6.) This Court has reviewed the entire trial transcript and agrees with Justice Fisch's conclusion that the cross-examination of Cepero was effective (albeit not sufficient to convince the jury to find Medina not guilty on all counts). Medina's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel should be DENIED.

IV. MEDINA'S CLAIM OF ACTUAL INNOCENCE CANNOT BE REVIEWED ON FEDERAL HABEAS REVIEW

Medina argues that Cepero's recantation on whether he could see a gun in Medina's hand constitutes newly discovered evidence that would likely have changed the verdict. (Dkt. No. 1: Medina Br. at 25.)

Medina's "newly discovered evidence" claim goes only to his guilt or innocence, not to the constitutionality of his conviction. The Supreme Court has explained that "newly discovered evidence relevant to the guilt of a state prisoner is not a ground for relief on federal habeas corpus." Townsend v. Sain, 372 U.S. 293, 317, 83 S.Ct. 745, 759 (1963); accord, e.g., Herrera v. Collins, 506 U.S. 390, 400, 113 S.Ct. 853, 860 (1993) ("Claims of actual innocence based on newly discovered evidence have never been held to state a ground for federal habeas relief absent an independent constitutional violation occurring in the course of the underlying state criminal proceeding."); Galandreo v. Perlman, No. 02-CV-6799, 03-MISC-0066, 2003 WL 23198790 at *12, 20 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 31, 2003) (Weinstein, D.J.) ("A showing of actual innocence serves merely as a gateway to the airing of the petitioner's defaulted claim and is not itself cognizable in habeas as a free-standing claim.") (citing cases); Jones v. Spitzer, 01 Civ. 9754, 2003 WL 1563780 at *47 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2003); Jones v. Duncan, 162 F.Supp.2d 204, 219-20 (S.D.N.Y.2001) (Peck, M.J.); White v. June 25, 1990); Roberts v. LeFevre, 88 Civ. 4114 1990 WL 6556 at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 22, 1990); United States v. Coughlin, 657

*27 "This rule is grounded in the principle that federal habeas courts sit to ensure that individuals are not imprisoned in violation of the Constitution-not to correct errors of fact." Herrera v. Collins, 506 U.S. at 400, 113 S.Ct. at 860 (citing cases). The "fundamental miscarriage of justice exception is available 'only where the prisoner supplements his constitutional claim with a colorable showing of factual innocence.'" Id. at 404, 113 S.Ct. at 862 (quoting Kuhlmann v. Wilson, 477 U.S. 436, 454, 106 S.Ct. 2616 2627 (1986)). It has never been extended to "freestanding claims of actual innocence." Herrera v. Collins, 506 U.S. at 404-05, 113 S.Ct. at 862-63.

Medina recognizes this principle (Medina Br. at 25), but relies on Ortega v. Duncan, where habeas relief was granted on the basis that newly discovered evidence proved that a key witness's material testimony was false. Ortega v. Duncan, 333 F.3d 102, 108-09 (2d Cir.2003) ("[W]hen false testimony is provided by a government witness without the prosecution's knowledge, due process is violated 'only if the testimony was material and 'the court [is left] with a firm belief that but for the perjured testimony, the defendant would most likely not have been convicted.' " ') (quoting United States v. Wallach, 935 F.2d 45, 456 (2d Cir.1991)). Medina's case is distinguishable because it is not clear that Cepero's trial testimony was false.

Medina asserts that Cepero's alleged "recantation" on whether he could see a gun in Medina's hand constitutes newly discovered evidence showing that Medina is actually innocent. (Medina Br. at 25.) At trial, Cepero testified that he saw in Medina's hands "a shiny object which appeared to be a gun." (Dkt. No. 5: State Br. at 18.) In a post-trial statement, Cepero allegedly repeated that he saw a "shiny object" in Medina's hands, but allegedly claimed that he was pressured by the police to say that the object was a gun. (State Br. at 18.) This supposed “newly discovered evidence” is an unsworn statement, rather than a sworn affirmation as required, and Medina cannot show that had it been presented, it would certainly have created a reasonable doubt as to his guilt. See, e.g., Lucidore v. New York State Div. of Parole, 209 F.3d 107, 114 (2d Cir.) (To show actual innocence, “a petitioner must present ‘new reliable evidence that was not presented at trial’ and ‘show that it is more likely than not that no reasonable juror would have found [him] guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.’”) (quoting Schlup v. Delo, 513 U.S. 298, 299, 115 S.Ct. 851, 854 (1995)), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 873, 121 S.Ct. 175 (2000); accord, e.g., Elliott v. Kuhlmann, 97 Civ. 2987, 2004 WL 806986 at *8 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 9, 2004) (“To show ‘actual innocence,’ Petitioner must produce new, reliable evidence sufficient to make a ‘colorable showing’ that ‘it is more likely than not that no reasonable juror would have convicted [Petitioner]’ in light of the new evidence.”). Cepero's trial testimony, stating the object “appeared” to be a gun, is not sufficiently different from his alleged “recantation.” Under the deferential AEDPA review standard, this Court cannot say that Justice Fisch's decision denying this claim should be set aside. Medina's habeas claim based on newly discovered evidence should be denied.

CONCLUSION

28 For the reasons discussed above, Medina's habeas petition should be DENIED, and a certificate of appealability should not issue.

FILING OF OBJECTIONS TO THIS REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636\(b\)\(1\) and Rule 72\(b\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the parties shall have ten (10) days from service of this Report to file written objections. See also Fed.R.Civ.P. 6. Such objections (and any responses to objections) shall be filed with the Clerk of the Court, with courtesy copies delivered to the chambers of the Honorable Sidney H. Stein, 500 Pearl Street, Room 1010, and to my chambers, 500 Pearl Street, Room 1370. Any requests for an extension of time for filing objections must be directed to Judge Stein. Failure to file objections will result in a waiver of those objections for purposes of appeal. Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 106 S.Ct. 466 (1985); *IUE AFL-CIO Pension Fund v. NOT FOR PUBLICATION MEMORANDUM & ORDER

AMON, J.

1 Petitioner Ernest West, represented by counsel, seeks a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. For the reasons set forth below, the petition is dismissed as untimely.

BACKGROUND

On the morning of November 17, 1991, Charles Caruth, a car service driver who knew West from West's previous employment with Caruth's car service, picked up West and an accomplice and drove them to Queens. West then stole Caruth's car and $200 by threatening Caruth with what Caruth believed to be a gun. Two days later, West was arrested while driving Caruth's car, and Caruth subsequently identified him in a lineup.

West was convicted at jury trial of robbery in the first and second degrees, criminal possession of stolen property in the third degree, and the unauthorized use of a vehicle in the third degree. On February 25, 1993, he was sentenced to concurrent indeterminate prison terms of twelve and one-half to twenty-five years on the first-degree robbery count, three and one-half to seven years on the possession of stolen property count, and a term of one year for the unauthorized use of a vehicle count.

On February 14, 1995, the Appellate Division, Second Department unanimously affirmed West's conviction. People v. West, 622 N.Y.S.2d 572, 212 A.D.2d 651 (2d Dept.1995). On March 31, 1995, the New York State Court of Appeals denied West's application for leave to appeal. People v. West, 85 N.Y.2d 916, 650 N.E.2d 1341, 627 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1995).

In or around December 1999,^{FN1} West filed a motion for a writ of error coram nobis, which was denied by the Appellate Division on March 27, 2000. People v. West, 705 N.Y.S.2d 278, 270 A.D.2d 509. West then filed a motion to reargue his appeal on April 25, 2000 and a motion to reargue the denial of his motion for a writ of error coram nobis on July 18, 2000. In a decision dated August 25, 2000, West's motion to reargue his appeal was denied. On October 26, 2000, West's motion to reargue the denial of his motion for a writ of error coram nobis was also denied.

^{FN1} Although there is some question as to the exact date of this motion, all parties concede that the motion was filed in or around December 1999.

West filed the instant petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254 on June 1, 2004. West claims that he was (1) denied his Sixth Amendment right to be present during all phases of the trial, (2) denied the effective assistance of appellate counsel, and (3) denied his Fifth Amendment right not be compelled to testify against himself based on the People's cross examination of him. Respondent argues that West's motion should be denied as untimely.

DISCUSSION

Pursuant to the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 ("AEDPA"), there is a one-year statute of limitations for habeas corpus petitions filed after the date of the AEDPA's enactment, April 24, 1996. 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(1\).^{FN2} However, prisoners whose conviction became final prior to the effective date of the AEDPA are accorded a period of one year after the effective date of AEDPA in which to file a first § 2254 petition. Ross v. Artuz, 150 F.3d 97, 103 (2d Cir.1998). AEDPA also provides for tolling of the one-year statute of limitations under certain circumstances. In particular, the "time during which a properly filed application for State post-conviction or other collateral review with respect to the pertinent judgment or claim is pending shall not be counted toward any period of limitation under this subsection." 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(2\). Furthermore, equitable tolling may apply if a petitioner is able to show that "extraordinary circumstances prevented [him] from filing his petition on time," and that "[petitioner] acted with reasonable diligence throughout the period he seeks to toll. Smith v. McGinnis, 208 F.3d 13, 17 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 840, 121 S.Ct. 104, 148 L.Ed.2d 63 (2000).

^{FN2}. The statute provides that the limitations period shall run from the latest of the following:

(A) the date on which the judgment became final by the conclusion of direct review or the expiration of the time for seeking such review;

(B) the date on which the impediment to filing an application created by State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, if the applicant was prevented from filing such State action;

(C) the date on which the constitutional right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if the right has been newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review; or

(D) the date on which the factual predicate of the claim presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.

28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(1\).

*2 A defendant's conviction becomes final when "a judgment of conviction has been rendered, the availability of appeal exhausted, and the time for a petition for certiorari elapsed or a petition for certiorari finally denied." Griffith v. Kentucky, 479 U.S. 314, 321 n. 6, 107 S.Ct. 708, 93 L.Ed.2d 649 (1987); see also 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\)\(1\)\(A\). In this case, the Appellate Division unanimously affirmed West's conviction, and the New York Court of Appeals denied leave to appeal on March 31, 1995. People v. West, 85 N.Y.2d 916, 650 N.E.2d 1341, 627 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1995). West's conviction became final ninety days thereafter, after the expiration of the period in which he could have petitioned for a writ of certiorari from the United States Supreme Court. Fernandez v. Artuz, 402 F.3d 111, 112 (2d Cir.2005). Since West's conviction became final well before AEDPA took effect on April 24, 1996, the one year grace period for filing habeas corpus petitions pursuant to § 2254 established in Ross v. Artuz applies in this case. The grace period expired on April 24, 1997. Ross, 150 F.3d at 103. West filed the current petition on June 1, 2004, over seven years too late. Although West filed post-conviction motions in state court, he did not do so until after the grace period expired on April 24, 1997, and therefore is not entitled to statutory tolling under § 2244\(d\)\(2\).^{FN3} West is therefore barred from instituting this action at this time absent circumstances meriting equitable tolling.

^{FN3}. West does not argue that he is entitled to statutory tolling.

A petitioner seeking habeas relief bears the burden of establishing the propriety of equitable tolling. Boos v.

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2005 WL 1861735 (E.D.N.Y.)
(Cite as: 2005 WL 1861735 (E.D.N.Y.))

Runyan, 201 F.3d 178, 185 (2d Cir.2000). Further, a “conclusory and vague claim, without a particularized description ... is manifestly insufficient to justify any further inquiry into tolling.” Id. In this case, West's only proffered basis for seeking equitable tolling is that (1) he “has not been granted an impartial review of his legitimate claims ... of ineffective assistance of counsel, and his other claims raised in the initial appellate papers,” (2) he “is unable to proceed without the assistance of counsel, and the actions of both the lower court and his counsel merit a tolling of the statute,” and (3) “a manifest injustice will occur if the Court refuses to hear his petition.” (Petitioner's Memorandum of Law at 7.) These conclusory assertions are insufficient to meet West's burden on this claim. West has not provided any factual basis to establish that he was subjected to extraordinary circumstances that prevented him from filing his petition on time, nor has he provided any evidence to indicate that he acted with reasonable diligence during the period of time that he seeks to toll. West's assertion that he is unable to proceed without legal counsel is unavailing, as lack of legal representation does not merit equitable tolling. See McGinnis, 208 F.3d at 18 (petitioner's pro se status throughout most of the period of limitations does not merit equitable tolling); see also Turner v. Johnson, 177 F.3d 390, 392 (5th Cir.1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1007, 120 S.Ct. 504, 145 L.Ed.2d 389 (1999) (“[N]either a plaintiff's unfamiliarity with the legal process nor his lack of representation during the applicable filing period merits equitable tolling”). As West has failed to state any basis upon which the period of limitations may be equitably tolled, this petition is untimely and must be dismissed.

CONCLUSION

*3 For the reasons set forth above, West's petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254 is denied as untimely. A certificate of appealability will not issue, as West has not made a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right. See 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). The Clerk of the Court is directed to enter judgment in accordance with this Order and to close the case.

Robert WARREN, Petitioner,
v.
Dale ARTUS, Superintendent of Clinton Correctional Facility, Respondent.
No. 9:05-CV-1032 (LEK/DEP).

March 30, 2007.

Robert Warren, pro se.

Hon. Eliot Spitzer, Attorney General of the State of New York, Malancha Chanda, Esq., Assistant Attorney General, of counsel, New York, NY, for Respondent.

DECISION AND ORDER

LAWRENCE E. KAHN, U.S. District Judge.

I. Background

*1 Petitioner Robert Warren ("Petitioner") filed his pro se Petition for habeas corpus in this matter, on August 15, 2005. See Petition (Dkt. No. 1). Respondent filed a Motion to dismiss the Petition on July 31, 2006. See Motion (Dkt. No. 10). Petitioner filed his Petition while an inmate at Clinton Correctional Facility, in Dannemora, New York. The Clinton Correctional Facility address is the address currently listed for Petitioner on the Docket of this case, and is the last address of record for Petitioner.

On February 20, 2007, a Court Notice was filed informing the parties of the availability of the option to consent to the jurisdiction of the assigned United States Magistrate Judge for all further proceedings. See Court Notice (Dkt. No. 12). The copy of the Notice that was mailed to Petitioner, however, was returned as undeliverable, with a notation on the envelope that Petitioner was not at the prison, as he had been paroled. See Dkt. No. 13.

In addition, searching the Inmate Locator maintained by the New York State Department of Correctional Services-using Petitioner's Department ID Number 98-A-5547-the Court has determined that Petitioner was discharged on October 23, 2006. See N.Y.S. DOCS Inmate Population Information Search website at <http://nysdocslookup.docs.state.ny.us/kinqw00> (last visited Mar. 27, 2007).

In the March 2006 Order of this Court, Petitioner was clearly warned that: "Petitioner is also required to promptly notify the Clerk's Office and counsel for Respondent of any change in his address; his failure to do so will result in the dismissal of this action". See March 2006 Order (Dkt. No. 6) at 3 (emphasis in original).

Furthermore, a Report and Recommendation was filed on March 12, 2007, by the Honorable David E. Peebles, United States Magistrate Judge, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636\(b\) and L.R. 72.4 of the Northern District of New York. See Report-Rec. (Dkt. No. 22). Said Report-Recommendation recommends granting Respondent's Motion to dismiss, and dismissing Petitioner's Petition. Id. Within ten days, excluding weekends and holidays, after a party has been served with a copy of a Magistrate Judge's Report-Recommendation, the party "may serve and file specific, written objections to the proposed findings and recommendations," FED.R.CIV.P. 72\(b\), in compliance with L.R. 72.1. No objections have been raised in the allotted time with respect to Judge Peebles' Report-Recommendation. Respondent has, however, filed a Letter Request asking this Court to adopt Judge Peebles' Report-Recommendation in its entirety. See Resp's Letter Request (Dkt. No. 16). In addition, after examining the record, the Court has determined that the Report and Recommendation is not subject to attack for plain error or manifest injustice.

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.)
(Cite as: 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.))

Therefore, after review of the Report-Recommendation, and for the reasons that follow, this Court adopts Judge Peebles' Report-Recommendation in its entirety, Respondent's Motion is granted, Petitioner's habeas Petition is dismissed, and this case is closed.

II. Discussion

*2 United States Courts are vested with broad discretion to impose sanctions for non-compliance with court orders, and those sanctions can include the severe sanction of dismissing a case. See Internet Law Library, Inc. v. Southridge Capital Mgmt., LLC, No. 01 Civ. 6600\(RLC\), 2005 WL 3370542, at *1 \(S.D.N.Y. Dec. 12, 2005\) ("Moreover, the court has the inherent authority to dismiss a case when a party disobeys any of its orders.") (citing Chambers v. Nasco, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 45 \(1991\)). Southridge addressed discovery orders, but there is also no difference for non-compliance with any other court order. See Dumpson v. Goord, No. 00-CV-6039 CJS, 2004 WL 1638183 \(W.D.N.Y. Jul. 22, 2004\) (Court ordered one of the plaintiffs to provide address where he could be reached; plaintiff failed to comply; plaintiff was dismissed from the case). Rule 41\(b\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure addresses not only a plaintiff's failure to prosecute, but also a plaintiff's "failure ... to comply with these rules or any order of court". FED.R.CIV.P. 41\(b\). See also Dumpson, 2004 WL 1638183, at *2 ("a court may sua sponte dismiss a plaintiff's action for failure to comply with an order of the court.... Such decisions are committed to the Court's sound discretion.... Pro se plaintiffs are entitled to a degree of leniency, but this 'should not extend to the disregard of a judge's plain directives.'") (citing, inter alia, Costello v. United States, 365 U.S. 265, 286-87 \(1961\); Lucas v. Miles, 84 F.3d 532, 538 \(2d Cir.1996\)).

Both attorneys and pro se litigants are required to immediately notify the Court and their adversaries of any change in their address or contact information. See N.D.N.Y. L.R. 10.1(b)(2). "Failure to notify the Court of a change of address in accordance with L.R. 10.1(b) may result in the dismissal of any pending action." N.D.N.Y. L.R. 41.2(b). "The demand that plaintiffs provide contact information is no esoteric rule of civil procedure, but rather the obvious minimal requirement for pursuing a lawsuit." Dumpson, 2004 WL 1638183, at *3.

Moreover, as then-District Judge Pooler stated:

It is neither feasible nor legally required that the clerks of the district courts undertake independently to maintain current addresses on all parties to pending actions. It is incumbent upon litigants to inform the clerk of address changes, for it is manifest that communications between the clerk and the parties or their counsel will be conducted principally by mail. In addition to keeping the clerk informed of any change of address, parties are obliged to make timely status inquiries. Address changes normally would be reflected by those inquiries if made in writing.

Dansby v. Albany County Corr. Facility Staff, No. 95-CV-1525, 1996 WL 172699, at *1 \(N.D.N.Y. Apr. 10, 1996\) (Pooler, D.J.) (quoting Perkins v. King, No. 84-3310, slip op. at 4 \(5th Cir. May 19, 1985\) (other citations omitted)); see, generally, N.D.N.Y. L.R. 41.2(b).

*3 The Second Circuit in LeSane v. Hall's Sec. Analyst, Inc., 239 F.3d 206 \(2d Cir.2001\), held that:

pro se plaintiffs should be granted special leniency regarding procedural matters.... Finally, "this court has repeatedly detailed factors ... to be considered before dismissal for failure to comply with a court order," and these factors significantly cabin a district court's discretion under Rule 41\(b\), so that "deference is due to the district court's decision to dismiss a pro se litigant's complaint only when the circumstances are sufficiently extreme."... Specifically, a district court contemplating dismissing a plaintiff's case, under Rule 41\(b\), for failure to prosecute must consider: "[1] the duration of the plaintiff's failures, [2] whether plaintiff had received notice that further delays would result in dismissal, [3] whether the defendant is likely to be prejudiced by further delay, [4] whether the district judge has take[n] care to strik[e] the balance between alleviating court calendar congestion and protecting a party's right to due process and a fair chance to be heard ... and [5] whether the judge has adequately assessed the efficacy of lesser sanctions.”

LeSane, 239 F.3d at 209 (citing and quoting Lucas, 84 F.3d at 535; Alvarez v. Simmons Mkt. Research Bureau, Inc., 839 F.2d 930, 932 (2d Cir.1988)).

This Court has evaluated the factors as set forth by the Second Circuit. Petitioner's inaction and failure to update his address has spanned several months. Petitioner has clearly failed to comply with an Order of the Court (March 2006-see Dkt. No. 6) and with Local Rule 10.1(b)(2) in failing to update his address. Petitioner's own failure to update his address has frustrated this Court's ability to contact him. The Court finds that it would be futile to make any further attempts to contact Petitioner. See, generally, Bottom v. Cooper, No. 03-CV-6493L, 2005 WL 2496052 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 7, 2005).

Given the law and factors discussed above, Petitioner's failures in this matter warrant the imposition of the sanction of dismissal.

III. Conclusion

Based on the foregoing discussion, it is hereby

ORDERED, that the Report-Recommendation (Dkt. No. 14) is APPROVED and ADOPTED in its ENTIRETY; and it is further

ORDERED, that Respondent's Motion to dismiss (Dkt. No. 10) is GRANTED; and it is further ORDERED, that Petitioner's Petition for a writ of habeas corpus (Dkt. No. 1) is DISMISSED both for the reasons contained in Judge Peebles' Report-Recommendation and due to Petitioner's failure to update his address as required by this District's Local Rules and a prior Order of the Court. The Clerk of the Court shall CLOSE Case Number 9:05-CV-1032 (LEK/DEP); and it is further ORDERED, that the Clerk serve a copy of this Order on all parties.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

DAVID E. PEEBLES, U.S. Magistrate Judge.

*4 Petitioner Robert Warren, who at the time of filing was a prison inmate as a result of a 1998 St. Lawrence County conviction of six separate offenses based upon a guilty plea entered in satisfaction of nine pending indictments, has commenced this proceeding seeking federal habeas relief, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. In his petition, Warren asserts that the cumulative sentence imposed in connection with his crimes of conviction, and upheld on appeal, resulted in his serving two sentences for the same offense.

In response to Warren's petition respondent has moved seeking its dismissal, arguing that its filing was untimely under the governing limitation provision, and that there is no basis to find equitable tolling or otherwise excuse its lateness. Respondent's motion also addresses the merits of Warren's petition, asserting that the state courts' rejection of his double jeopardy claim was neither contrary to nor an unreasonable application of governing clearly established Supreme Court precedent.^{FN1}

FN1. While moving for pre-answer dismissal of a section 2254 petition is generally not a favored practice, there is authority to support a respondent's choice to make such a motion under appropriate circumstances. See McLeod v. Moscicki, No. 02 Civ. 9335, 2003 WL 22427757, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 22, 2003) (allowing a Rule 12(b)(6) motion under similar circumstances, and citing cases); see also, e.g., Valverde v. Stinson, 224 F.3d 129, 136 (2d Cir.2000) (discussing motion to dismiss on basis of section 2244 without comment on procedural propriety); Garcia v. Portuondo, 334 F.Supp.2d 446, 450 (S.D.N.Y.2004) (same).

(Cite as: 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.))

Having carefully reviewed the parties' submissions and considered their arguments regarding the preliminary, threshold issue, I find that the filing of the petition in this matter was untimely, and that the petitioner has presented no basis to overlook this deficiency. Turning to the merits of Warren's otherwise untimely petition, and assuming that his habeas claim is deemed to have been properly exhausted, when considered with the requisite deferential standard as a backdrop, I find that the state court's rejection of that claim is neither contrary to nor an unreasonable application of clearly established Supreme Court precedent.

I. BACKGROUND

On August 4, 1998, at the time faced with as many as nine pending indictments against him, petitioner entered a plea of guilty in St. Lawrence County Court to six separate felony offenses, including attempted escape in the first degree, attempted second degree burglary, criminal possession of marijuana in the second degree, first degree criminal contempt, sexual abuse in the first degree, and driving while intoxicated. See Transcript of Plea Hearing, conducted on August 4, 1998, at 2-19. As a result of those pleas, petitioner was sentenced on September 8, 1998 as a second felony offender to various determinate and indeterminate prison terms, some of which were to run concurrently, while others were to be consecutively served, resulting in an aggregate sentence of between nine and ten and one-half years of incarceration.^{FN2} Transcript of Sentencing Hearing, conducted on September 8, 1998, at 2-22; see also People v. Warren, 280 A.D.2d 75, 76, 721 N.Y.S.2d 152, 152-53 \(3d Dep't 2001\). Also included as part of the trial court's sentence was the issuance of an order of protection in favor of petitioner's spouse and stepdaughter, both of whom were found to be victims of certain of his crimes. Warren, 280 A.D.2d at 76, 721 N.Y.S.2d at 153. Petitioner was represented by counsel both at the time of entry of his plea, and at sentencing.

^{FN2}. The sentence imposed by the trial court included 1) an indeterminate term of imprisonment of between one and one-half and three years for attempted escape in the first degree; 2) a determinate term of three and one-half years on the charge of attempted second degree burglary, to run consecutively to the sentence for attempted escape; 3) an indeterminate term of between two and four years of incarceration on the drug possession charge, to run concurrently with the sentences for attempted escape and attempted burglary; 4) an indeterminate term of two to four years of imprisonment on the charge of first degree criminal contempt, to run concurrently with the sentences for both attempted escape and attempted burglary; 5) a determinate term of four years of imprisonment on the charge of first degree sexual abuse, to run consecutively to the sentences for attempted escape and attempted burglary, but concurrently with the sentences for marijuana possession and criminal contempt; and 6) an indeterminate term of imprisonment of between two and four years on the charge of driving while intoxicated, to run concurrently with all other sentences. See Transcript of Sentencing Hearing, conducted on September 8, 1998, at 16-20. The net result of those sentences required petitioner to serve consecutive sentences of one and one-half to three years for attempted escape, three and one-half years for attempted burglary, and four years for sexual abuse, yielding an aggregate sentence of between nine and ten and one-half years of incarceration.

*5 Petitioner appealed his conviction to the New York State Supreme Court Appellate Division, Third Judicial Department, resulting in the issuance by that court of a decision dated March 1, 2001, modifying the conviction in a manner which did not affect his sentence of incarceration, and otherwise affirming the trial court's judgment. Id. at 77-78, 721 N.Y.S.2d at 153-54. While rejecting the argument now being made to this court, regarding the cumulative effects of his sentence, in its opinion the Third Department did conclude that the trial court had erred in its issuance of the order of protection, in that it exceeded in duration the maximum period authorized under New York law. Id. at 77, 721 N.Y.S.2d at 153. Finding the information necessary to affix an appropriate expiration date to be lacking in the record, the Appellate Division remitted the matter to the trial court for the limited purpose of reissuing an appropriate order of protection with a proper end date. Id. at 78, 721 N.Y.S.2d at 153-54. In its decretal paragraph, the Third Department

[o]rdered that the judgment is modified, on the law, by reversing so much thereof as fixed the duration of the order of protection; matter remitted to the County Court of St. Lawrence County for further proceedings not inconsistent with this Court's decision; and, as so modified, affirmed.

Id. There is no indication in the record that petitioner sought leave to appeal that determination to the New York State Court of Appeals.^{FN3} It was not until on or about July 12, 2004 that the trial court acted upon the remittitur and issued a new order of protection in the case. See Petitioner's Memorandum (Dkt. No. 11) Attachment 6.

^{FN3}. In his petition, Warren asserts that permission for leave to appeal that determination was made, but denied. See Petition (Dkt. No. 1) ¶ 9(e), at 3. There is no support for this assertion, however, either in the state court records provided by respondent's counsel or in the reported history associated with that appeal. Moreover, in a later submission, Warren acknowledged that he did not pursue the matter to the New York State Court of Appeals. See Amended Memorandum (Dkt. No. 5) ¶ 3, at 2.

In addition to perfecting a direct appeal from his judgment of conviction, petitioner has pursued efforts to obtain two separate forms of collateral relief from the state courts. On August 31, 2004, Warren filed an application under section 440.20 of the N.Y. Criminal Procedure Law to set aside his sentence. That application was denied by order issued by County Court Judge Kathleen Rogers on October 19, 2004. Leave to appeal that determination to the New York State Court of Appeals was subsequently denied by the Third Department on December 29, 2004.

Petitioner also sought relief in the state courts through the filing on May 6, 2004, in Clinton County Supreme Court, of an application for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to Article 70 of the N.Y. Civil Practice Law and Rules. By decision and judgment issued on June 7, 2004, Acting Supreme Court Justice S. Peter Feldstein denied petitioner's application for state court habeas relief. That determination was upheld, on appeal to the Third Department, by decision issued on April 21, 2005. See People ex rel. Warren v. Artus, 17 A.D.3d 896, 792 N.Y.S.2d 879 \(3d Dep't 2005\).^{FN4} On June 30, 2005, leave to appeal the denial of habeas relief to the New York Court of Appeals was denied. People ex rel. Warren v. Artus, 5 N.Y.3d 705, 834 N.E.2d 1262 \(2005\).

^{FN4}. An application for reargument of the state court's refusal to grant habeas relief was denied on August 26, 2004.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

*6 Petitioner commenced this proceeding on August 15, 2005. Dkt. No. 1. Appropriately named as the respondent in Warren's petition is Dale Artus, Superintendent of the Clinton Correctional Facility, where petitioner was held at the time of filing. Id. Following the filing by petitioner on December 22, 2005 of a legal memorandum in support of his habeas petition, Dkt. No. 5, apparently prompted by a previously-issued order by District Judge Lawrence E. Kahn on November 21, 2005, Dkt. No. 4, respondent Artus, who is represented by the office of the New York State Attorney General, responded by the filing on July 31, 2006 of a motion to dismiss Warren's petition on the basis of the governing one year statute of limitations, and additionally on the merits. Dkt. No. 10. Petitioner has since countered in opposition to that motion. Dkt. No. 11.

Respondent's motion, which is now ripe for determination, has been referred to me for the issuance of a report and recommendation pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) and Northern District of New York Local Rule 72.3(c). See also Fed.R.Civ.P. Rule 72\(b\).

III. DISCUSSION

A. Mootness

Of its own initiative, the court has made an investigation as to petitioner's current status, and has learned that he was released from custody in October of 2006. See

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.)
(Cite as: 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.))

<http://nysdocslookup.docs.state.ny.us>. The court must therefore determine whether Warren's release from prison, subsequent to commencement of this proceeding, renders the habeas claims now raised moot.

Habeas corpus relief is available to a state prisoner who is "in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court ... on the ground that he [or she] is in custody in violation of the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States". 28 U.S.C. § 2254\(a\). While on its face this provision contemplates that a habeas petitioner be in custody, section 2254 does not require that a petitioner be physically confined in order for a federal district court to retain jurisdiction over a properly filed habeas petition. See Maleng v. Cook, 490 U.S. 488, 491, 109 S.Ct. 1923, 1925 (1989). Thus, for example, a petitioner who, like Warren, has been released from custody after the filing of a habeas petition satisfies the "in custody" requirement of section 2254 if he or she remains subject to adverse collateral consequences which result from the subject conviction. See Carafas v. LaVallee, 391 U.S. 234, 237-39, 88 S.Ct. 1556, 1559-60 (1968). Collateral consequences are presumed to persist as a result of a conviction even after an inmate's release from prison.^{FN5} Spencer v. Kemna, 523 U.S. 1, 12, 118 S.Ct. 978, 985 (1998) ("it is an 'obvious fact of life that most criminal convictions do in fact entail adverse collateral legal consequences' ") (quoting Sibron v. New York, 392 U.S. 40, 55, 88 S.Ct. 1889, 1899 (1968)); see also, e.g., Barker v. Reynolds, No. 9:98-CV-0732, 2001 WL 1860929, at *2 (N.D.N.Y. Apr. 19, 2001) (Sharpe, M.J.) (citing Spencer and Sibron); Binder v. Szostak, No. 96-CV-840, 1997 WL 176353, at *3 (N.D.N.Y. Apr. 11, 1997) (Pooler, J. and DiBianco, M.J.).

^{FN5}. Examples of such potential collateral consequences can include the inability to serve as a juror, engage in certain businesses, or vote. Johnson v. Levine, No. 00 Civ. 8402, 2001 WL 282719, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 21, 2001).

*7 In this case, since there is no indication the petitioner no longer suffers any adverse consequences from his conviction, his claims do not appear to have been rendered moot by his release from prison.

B. Statute of Limitations

Enactment by Congress of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 ("AEDPA"), Pub.L. No. 104-132, 110 Stat. 1214 \(1996\), brought about significant changes to the prisoner litigation landscape. One of those was the institution of a one-year statute of limitations for habeas corpus petitions filed after April 24, 1996. 28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\).^{FN6}

^{FN6}. That section provides, in relevant part, that

(1) [a] 1-year period of limitation shall apply to an application for a writ of habeas corpus by a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court. The limitation period shall run from the latest of-

(A) the date on which the judgment became final by the conclusion of direct review or the expiration of the time for seeking such review;
* * *

(2) The time during which a properly filed application for State post-conviction or other collateral review with respect to the pertinent judgment or claim is pending shall not be counted toward any period of limitation under this subsection.

28 U.S.C. § 2244\(d\).

The obvious starting point for resolving issues surrounding the timeliness of a section 2254 habeas petition is a determination of when the challenged conviction became final. In most cases, including in connection with convictions finalized subsequent to the April 24, 1996 effective date of the AEDPA, a state conviction becomes final when the time to seek review in the Supreme Court by petition for writ of certiorari expires. Williams v. Artuz, 237 F.3d 147, 151 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 924, 122 S.Ct. 279 (2001). In this case, however, petitioner did not seek leave to appeal the Third Department's determination to the New York State Court of Appeals. Accordingly, Warren's conviction became final on March 31, 2001, upon expiration of the thirty day period within which to seek review by that court of the Appellate Division's decision affirming his conviction. Bethea v. Girdich, 293 F.3d 577, 578 (2d Cir.2002); People v. Wooley, 40 N.Y.2d 699, 700-01, 358 N.E.2d 493, 494 (1976); see N.Y. Criminal Procedure Law § 460.10\(5\)\(a\).

In his opposition to respondent's motion, petitioner argues that because of the fact that the Appellate Division remitted the matter to the sentencing court for the issuance of an amended order of protection, an act which did not occur until July of 2004, the Third Department's decision was not immediately appealable, and thus his conviction was not final, until after the amended order of protection was issued. In making that argument, Warren places heavy reliance upon the Ninth Circuit's decision in United States v. Colvin, 204 F.3d 1221 (9th Cir.2000). In that case the two judge majority of the panel hearing the case, over a spirited dissent, concluded that an appellate decision which affirmed the defendant's conviction on two of three counts, but reversed as to the third and remanded the matter to the trial court with directions to strike the conviction on the third count and make a corresponding reduction in the special assessment imposed, was not a final determination which sufficed to trigger commencement of the applicable period for seeking habeas review, in that case under 28 U.S.C. § 2255.^{FN7} Id. at 1222-26.

FN7. 28 U.S.C. § 2255 prescribes a mechanism for a sentenced federal prisoner to challenge his or her continued custodial status by seeking to vacate, set aside or correct the sentence, thereby partially supplanting earlier jurisprudence relying upon 28 U.S.C. § 2241 to accomplish such an end. Cephas v. Nash, 328 F.3d 98, 103-04 (2d Cir.2003).

Unfortunately for Warren, the Ninth Circuit's decision in Colvin has not been universally accepted, and in fact was recently rejected by the Second Circuit in Burrell v. United States, 467 F.3d 160 (2d Cir.2006). In Burrell, after reviewing the applicable caselaw, which was noted to be in conflict, including the Ninth Circuit's decision in Colvin, the Second Circuit concluded that when a portion of a criminal judgment is reversed and the matter is remanded to the trial court solely for the purpose of performing a "strictly ministerial task of correcting the judgment" in a manner not affecting the defendant's sentence, the appellate decision is not thereby deprived of finality. Id. at 169.

*8 In order to determine whether Burrell is controlling in this case, it is necessary to understand the interplay between the petitioner's judgment of conviction and the order of protection issued by the trial court. New York law defines the term "judgment" as being "comprised of a conviction and the sentence imposed" by the court. N.Y.Crim. Proc. Law § 1.20\(15\) (McKinney 2003); People v. Hernandez, 93 N.Y.2d 261, 267, 689, 711 N.E.2d 972, 975 (1999). A criminal defendant has the right to appeal a "judgment." N.Y.Crim. Proc. § 450.10 (McKinney 2005); People v. Nieves, 2 N.Y.3d 310, 314, 778 N.Y.S.2d 751, 811 N.E.2d 13, 16 (2004); Hernandez, 93 N.Y.2d at 269, 711 N.E.2d at 976. Under New York Law, an order of protection is not a form of punishment or a component of sentencing, but is instead a measure taken to protect victims and witnesses. Nieves, 2 N.Y.3d at 316, 811 N.E.2d at 17. An order of protection issued at the time of sentencing is, nonetheless, "part of the final adjudication of the criminal action involving [the] defendant." Id. at 315, 811 N.E.2d at 16.

In Nieves, the court drew an analogy between an order of protection and a certification as a sex offender under the Sex Offender Registration Act, codified at N.Y. Correction Law § 168 et seq. Id. at 315, 811 N.E.2d at 16-17. The court held that while neither is a component of sentencing, both are part of the final judgment of conviction in a criminal case. Id. Accordingly, a defendant has the right to appeal an order of protection entered at sentencing. Id. Applying a similar line of reasoning, in Hernandez the court held that the defendant's certification as a sex offender "was unmistakably part of the court's final adjudication with respect to defendant's crimes," and that the certification, along with the order of protection entered against the defendant, "formed an integral part of the conviction and sentencing." 93 N.Y.2d at 267, 711 N.E.2d at 975. It is thus apparent that under New York law, the issuance of an order of protection entered at sentencing, while not affecting a defendant's sentence, is part of the final judgment entered in a criminal case.

(Cite as: 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.))

The circumstances now presented are closely analogous to those before the court in Burrell. As in Burrell, the Third Department remitted the matter to the trial court for the sole purpose of performing a ministerial task, in this case to recalculate the duration of its order of protection. In doing so the Third Department issued specific directives for the court to follow when affixing the duration of the order of protection, instructing it that “the maximum duration of the order of protection is three years from the date of the expiration of the four-year maximum” of the sentences imposed upon the criminal contempt and sexual abuse convictions. Warren, 280 A.D.2d at 77-78, 721 N.Y.S.2d at 153. While the trial court unmistakably retained the discretion to issue an order of protection of a shorter duration, it had already plainly evidenced its intention to issue one to remain in effect for the maximum allowable period. On remand, the trial court was thus left to perform a mere arithmetic calculation, using as guidance the specific instructions provided by the Third Department. That calculation thus was one which “ ‘involv[ed] obedience to instructions ... instead of discretion, judgment, or skill,’ “ and was therefore a ministerial duty. Burrell, 467 F.3d at 164 (quoting Blacks Law Dictionary 1017 (8th Ed.2004)). Because the remand was clearly for “ministerial purposes,” it did not delay the “judgment’s finality.” Id. Based upon these circumstances I find that petitioner’s judgment of conviction became final thirty days following issuance of the Third Department’s decision, or on March 31, 2001.

*9 Once the appropriate limitation period commencement date is established, it is next necessary to determine whether there are any intervening tolling periods resulting from applications by the petitioner for collateral review. Under the AEDPA, “[t]he time during which a properly filed application for State post-conviction or other collateral review with respect to the pertinent judgment or claim is pending” is properly excludable from the one year limitation period, and results in its tolling. 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(2). Because the applicable statute speaks in terms of tolling, however, any such collateral or other review application filed within the otherwise applicable one year statute of limitations merely serves to toll the limitation period; such an event does not have the effect of resetting the one year clock. Smith v. McGinnis, 208 F.3d 13, 17 (2d Cir.) (per curiam), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 840, 121 S.Ct. 104 (2000); see also Stokes v. Miller, 216 F.Supp.2d 169, 172 N.3 (S.D.N.Y.2000) (“It is well-settled that post-conviction or other collateral review does not start the one year statute of limitations to run anew”) (citing Smith).

The petitioner in this case filed two applications for collateral review, one by way of an application under section 440.20 to vacate his sentence, and the other in the form of a petition seeking state court habeas review under Article 70 of the N.Y. Civil Practice Law and Rules. Since both of those applications were filed in 2004, and thus after expiration of the one year limitation period, they did not effect any tolling of that period.^{FN8} Consequently, even giving petitioner the benefit of the prison mailbox rule, in light of his pro se inmate state status, see Noble v. Kelley, 246 F.3d 93, 97 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 886, 122 S.Ct. 197 (2001), and assuming that the petition was conveyed to prison officials on August 12, 2005, the day on which it was signed, it was untimely absent a basis to overlook its lateness.

^{FN8}. Although a timely application under section 440.20 filed within one year after petitioner’s judgment of conviction became final would have served to toll the application limitations period, see King v. Cunningham, 442 F.Supp.2d 171, 180 (S.D.N.Y.2006), the situation is less clear with regard to his habeas petition. See Martino v. Barbary, No. 03-CV-0923, 2005 WL 724133, at *2 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2005) (collecting cases and noting a split among courts within the circuit on this issue).

C. Equitable Tolling

While Warren’s petition is facially time-barred, the Second Circuit has cautioned that a habeas petition which would otherwise be subject to dismissal in light of the AEDPA’s statute of limitations may nonetheless be considered by a district court where the court determines that the statute of limitations should be equitably tolled. See Smith, 208 F.3d at 17-18. And, although the Second Circuit has acknowledged that the “question remains open” as to whether the United States Constitution requires that an “actual innocence” exception be engrafted onto the AEDPA’s statute of limitations, see Whitley v. Senkowski,

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.)
(Cite as: 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.))

317 F.3d 223, 225 \(2d Cir.2003\), that court has nevertheless directed district courts to consider a properly raised claim of actual innocence as a basis for invoking equitable tolling before dismissing a habeas petition as untimely filed. Id.; see also Doe v. Menefee, 391 F.3d 147, 161 \(2d Cir.2004\).

1. Traditional Tolling

*10 Equitable tolling applies “only in the ‘rare and exceptional circumstance[]’.” Smith, 208 F.3d at 17 (quoting Turner v. Johnson, 177 F.3d 390, 391-92 \(5th Cir.\), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1007, 120 S.Ct. 504 \(1999\)) (alteration in original). Under traditional tolling principles, the equitable tolling of the AEDPA's statute of limitations is only available when “ ‘extraordinary circumstances’ prevent a prisoner from filing a timely habeas petition.” Warren v. Garvin, 219 F.3d 111, 113 \(2d Cir.2000\) (quoting Smith, 208 F.3d at 17); see also Agramonte v. Walsh, No. 00 CV 892, 2002 WL 1364086, at *1 \(E.D.N.Y. June 20, 2002\). “To merit application of equitable tolling, the petitioner must demonstrate that he acted with ‘reasonable diligence’ during the period he wishes to have tolled, but that despite his efforts, extraordinary circumstances ‘beyond his control’ prevented successful filing during that time.” Smaldone v. Senkowski, 273 F.3d 133, 138 \(2d Cir.2001\) (quoting Smith, 208 F.3d at 17), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1017, 122 S.Ct. 1606 \(2002\); see also Warren, 219 F.3d at 113 (citing Smith, 208 F.3d at 17).

In this instance, petitioner does seemingly request equitable tolling, arguing that his lack of access to sufficient books and legal assistance, as well as the fact that he did not receive (or even request) a copy of his sentencing minutes until April of 2004, provide a basis for equitable tolling. Such circumstances, however, are insufficiently unusual or compelling to warrant a finding of equitable tolling in this case. Gant v. Goord, 430 F.Supp.2d 135, 139 \(W.D.N.Y.2006\) (“In general, the difficulties attendant on prison life, such as transfers between facilities, solitary confinement, lockdowns, restricted access to the law library, and an inability to secure court documents, do not by themselves qualify as extraordinary circumstances.”); Peck v. United States, No. 06-CV-0822, 03-CR-496, 2006 WL 3762001, at *5 \(N.D.N.Y. Dec. 20, 2006\) (finding no basis for equitable tolling where petitioner claimed that he had inadequate access to legal books and legal assistance).

2. Actual Innocence Tolling

To ameliorate the harshness of the AEDPA's one year procedural bar to seeking habeas review in the unusual case where the petitioner appears to be the victim of a fundamental miscarriage of justice and is actually innocent of the crime of conviction, courts, including the Second Circuit, have suggested that the presentation of a credible claim of actual innocence may provide a basis for equitable tolling, provided that the petitioner can also show that he or she pursued the claim with reasonable diligence. Doe, 391 F.3d at 161; Whitley, 317 F.3d at 225. Addressing the tension which such an exception would potentially present with respect to the considerations of comity and finality underpinning the AEDPA's limitations requirement, the Second Circuit observed that “[b]ecause credible claims of actual innocence are ‘extremely rare,’ federal court adjudication of constitutional challenges by petitioners who may be actually innocent prevents miscarriages of justice, but does not threaten state interests in finality.” Doe, 391 F.3d at 161 (citing Schlup v. Delo, 513 U.S. 298, 321-22, 115 S.Ct. 851, 864-65 \(1995\)). Drawing upon the Supreme Court's decision in Schlup, which addressed the actual innocence exception to a petitioner's ability to file successive or otherwise procedurally defaulted habeas petitions in federal courts, the Second Circuit in Doe required that the claim of actual innocence be supported “with new reliable evidence—whether it be exculpatory scientific evidence, trustworthy eyewitness accounts, or critical physical evidence—that was not presented at trial.” Doe, 391 F.3d at 161 (quoting Schlup, 513 U.S. at 324, 115 S.Ct. at 865).

*11 In this instance Warren does not allege that he is actually innocent of the crimes of his conviction, which was the product of his guilty plea and concomitant admission of having committed those offenses. Accordingly, Warren has not provided any compelling grounds for the court to apply the Whitley test and recommend that the AEDPA statute of limitations be tolled based upon a claim of actual innocence. See, e.g., Catala v. Bennett, 273 F.Supp.2d 468, 473-74 \(S.D.N.Y.2003\) (acknowledging Whitley's application to claims of actual innocence but declining to apply it when the petitioner in that case did not attempt an actual innocence claim).

In sum, I recommend against the invocation of equitable tolling to salvage Warren's otherwise untimely petition.

D. Merits of Warren's Petition

As has been noted, petitioner apparently did not pursue the direct appeal of his conviction to the State's highest court. He did, however, assert arguments surrounding his sentencing, and specifically his claim that the resulting term of incarceration was unlawful, in the context of both his motion to vacate his sentence, pursuant to section 440.20 of the N.Y. Criminal Procedure Law, and by way of his petition for state habeas relief. Since both of those resulting determinations were pursued through to the Appellate Division, and a request was made for leave to appeal to the Court of Appeals from the denial of his state habeas petition, respondent does not contest Warren's petition on the procedural basis of failure to exhaust and, consequently, I will assume that he has fulfilled his obligation to pursue his claims to the highest state court before seeking to elicit this court's habeas intervention, and will turn to the merits of his claim.

1. Standard of Review

Critical to a review of the merits of Warren's petition is recognition of his deferential standard which this court must apply. Enactment of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 ("AEDPA"), Pub.L. No. 104-132, 110 Stat. 1214 \(1996\), brought about significant new limitations on the power of a federal court to grant habeas relief to a state court prisoner under 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Under the AEDPA, "a determination of a factual issue made by a State court shall be presumed to be correct [and t]he applicant shall have the burden of rebutting the presumption of correctness by clear and convincing evidence." 28 U.S.C. § 2254\(e\)\(1\); see also Boyette v. Lefevre, 246 F.3d 76, 88 \(2d Cir. 2001\) (quoting § 2254\(e\)\(1\)) (internal quotes omitted). Significantly, a federal court may not grant habeas relief to a state prisoner on a claim that was adjudicated on the merits in State court proceedings unless the adjudication of the claim-

1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or

2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

*12 28 U.S.C. § 2254\(d\); see also Noble v. Kelly, 246 F.3d 93, 98 \(2d Cir.\), cert. denied, 122 S.Ct. 197 \(2001\); Boyette, 246 F.3d at 88. When applying this test, the Second Circuit has noted that [u]nder AEDPA, we ask three questions to determine whether a federal court may grant habeas relief: 1) Was the principle of Supreme Court case law relied upon in the habeas petition "clearly established" when the state court ruled? 2) If so, was the state court's decision "contrary to" that established Supreme Court precedent? 3) If not, did the state court's decision constitute an "unreasonable application" of that principle?

Williams v. Artuz, 237 F.3d 147, 152 \(2d Cir.2001\) (citing Williams v. Taylor and Francis S. v. Stone, 221 F.3d 100, 108-09 \(2d Cir.2000\)).

Because the AEDPA's restriction on federal habeas power was premised in no small part upon the duty of state courts to uphold the Constitution and faithfully apply federal laws, the AEDPA's exacting review standards apply only to federal claims which have been actually adjudicated on the merits in the state court. Washington v. Shriver, 255 F.3d 45, 52-55 \(2d Cir.2001\). Specifically, as the Second Circuit explained in Sellan v. Kuhlman, "[f]or the purposes of AEDPA deference, a state court 'adjudicate[s]' a state prisoner's federal claim on the merits when it (1) disposes of the claim 'on the merits,' and (2) reduces its disposition to judgment." 261 F.3d 303, 312 \(2001\); see Jimenez v. Walker, 458 F.3d 130, 140 \(2d Cir.2006\). Significantly, the Second Circuit further held that when a state court adjudicates a claim on the merits, "a federal habeas court must defer in the manner prescribed by 28 U.S.C. § 2254\(d\)\(1\) to the state court's decision on the federal claim—even if the state court does not explicitly refer to either the federal claim or to relevant federal case law.” Sellan, 261 F.3d at 312 (emphasis added).^{FN9,FN10}

^{FN9}. In the past, when wrestling with interpretation and application of the AEDPA's deference standard the Second Circuit had suggested, although leaving open the question, that deference under section 2254\(d\) is not mandated if a state court decides a case without citing to federal law or otherwise making reference to a federal constitutional claim in a manner adequate to justify deference under AEDPA, in which case pre-AEDPA standards would apply. Washington, 255 F.3d at 52-55; see also Noble, 246 F.3d at 98. That court clarified in Sellan, however, that the question of whether or not a state court makes specific reference to a constitutional principle is not controlling.

^{FN10}. In his opinion in Sellan, Chief Judge Walker acknowledged that enlightenment in state court decisions as to the manner of disposition of federal claims presented would greatly enhance a federal court's ability, on petition for habeas review, to apply the AEDPA deference standard. Sellan, 261 F.3d at 312. He noted, however, that a state court's failure to provide such useful guidance does not obviate a federal court's duty to make the analysis and pay appropriate deference if the federal claim was adjudicated on the merits, albeit tacitly so. Id.

When a state court's decision is found to be decided “on the merits”, that decision is “contrary to” established Supreme Court precedent if it applies a rule that contradicts Supreme Court precedent, or decides a case differently than the Supreme Court on a set of materially indistinguishable facts. Williams, 529 U.S. at 405-06, 120 S.Ct. at 1519-20. Moreover, a federal court engaged in habeas review must also determine not whether the state court's determination was merely incorrect or erroneous, but instead whether it was “objectively unreasonable”. Sellan, 261 F.3d at 315 (quoting Williams, 529 U.S. at 409, 120 S.Ct. at 1521 (O'Connor, J.)). The Second Circuit has noted that this inquiry admits of “[s]ome increment of incorrectness beyond error”, though “the increment need not be great [.]” Francis S. v. Stone, 221 F.3d 100, 111 (2d Cir.2000).

2. Clearly Established Supreme Court Precedent

Warren's petition asserts a single ground, alleging that the net affect of the various sentences imposed in connection with the six crimes of connection was to render the sentence unlawful, in derogation of his right to be free from double jeopardy.

*13 The double jeopardy clause, which forms an integral part of the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution, provides that no “person [shall] be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb....” U.S. Const. Amend. V. The essence of controlling double jeopardy jurisprudence has been summarized as follows by the Second Circuit:

[t]he Double Jeopardy Clause protects, among other things, against multiple punishments for the same offense. See North Carolina v. Pearce, 395 U.S. 711, 717, 89 S.Ct. 2072, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969). When two acts violate the same statute, ... the Supreme Court has distinguished between a statute that punishes a continuous offense and one that punishes distinct acts. See Blockburger v. United States, 284 U.S. 299, 303, 52 S.Ct. 180, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932) (two drug sales to the same person on different days punishable as separate offenses). The Court looked to see if lawmakers had intended to criminalize each act. “The test is whether the individual acts are prohibited, or the course of action which they constitute. If the former, then each act is punishable separately.... If the latter, there can be but one penalty.” Id. at 302, 52 S.Ct. 180.

McCullough v. Bennett, 413 F.3d 244, 246 (2d Cir.2005).

It should be noted that the charging of multiple offenses based upon the same conduct does not per se violate the double jeopardy clause. United States v. Cavanaugh, 948 F.2d 405, 413 n. 8 (8th Cir.1991) (citing Ohio v. Johnson, 467 U.S. 443, 449, 104 S.Ct. 2536, 2540-41 \(1984\)). Instead, the question becomes whether, by enacting the particular criminal provision, the respective legislative body intended that facts underlying the potentially overlapping counts constitute separate “ ‘units’ of prosecution”. United States v. Ansalidi, 372 F.3d at 118, 124 (2d Cir.2004) (citing Bell v. United States, 349 U.S. 81, 83-84, 175 S.Ct. 620, 622 \(1955\)).

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.)
(Cite as: 2007 WL 1017112 (N.D.N.Y.))

Petitioner's double jeopardy argument is perplexing. The operative crimes for which he received consecutive sentences included attempted escape, attempted burglary, and sexual abuse. The court has reviewed the transcribed minutes of petitioner's plea hearing and finds no basis to conclude that in accepting pleas to those three charges, and imposing consecutive sentences in connection with those pleas, punished the petitioner twice for the same criminal conduct. FN11 FN11. In his memorandum in opposition to respondent's dismissal motion, petitioner intimates that the sentence that he received may have resulted in a breach of a plea agreement which included assurances as to the sentence to be imposed by the court. See Petitioner's Memorandum (Dkt. No. 11) at 12-22. If such a claim is being made it is not apparent from the face of Warren's petition. Moreover, it does not appear that such a claim has ever been fairly presented to the state courts prior to being raised in this proceeding, and therefore is not properly exhausted. Fama v. Comm'r of Corr. Servs., 235 F.3d 804, 808-09 \(2d Cir.2000\) (“To have exhausted claims in state court, petitioner must have “fairly presented” each federal claim to the highest state court.”) (citation omitted).

Accordingly, I find no basis to conclude that the state courts' determination that no double jeopardy violation has occurred, arising from his sentencing, was either contrary to or an unreasonable application of clearly established Supreme Court precedent.

IV. SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATION

Based upon the circumstances now presented, it appears that petitioner's conviction became final when his time to seek leave to appeal to the Court of Appeals from the Third Department's decision affirming his conviction expired, notwithstanding the fact that the matter was remitted to the trial court for an essentially ministerial act, in the nature of substituting a new order of protection which was compliant with the applicable legal provisions under which it was issued for the prior, invalid order. Since the petition in this matter was filed more than a year after that date, and having been presented with no proper basis to conclude that the governing limitation period should be equitably tolled, I recommend a finding that the petition is time barred and should be dismissed on this procedural basis, without reaching the merits. In the event that the court finds that the petition was timely filed and should be considered on its merits, I find that the state courts' determination rejecting Warren's sentence claims was neither contrary to nor an unreasonable application of clearly established Supreme Court precedent, and find no other basis to conclude that he was the subject of a constitutional deprivation.

14 Based upon the foregoing it is hereby

RECOMMENDED that respondent's motion to dismiss the petition in this matter [Dkt. No. 10] be GRANTED, and the petition be DISMISSED in all respects.

NOTICE: pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636\(b\)\(1\), the parties have ten (10) days within which to file written objections to the foregoing report-recommendation. Any objections shall be filed with the clerk of the court. FAILURE TO OBJECT TO THIS REPORT WITHIN TEN (10) DAYS WILL PRECLUDE APPELLATE REVIEW. It is further ORDERED that the Clerk of the Court serve a copy of this report and recommendation upon the parties in accordance with this court's local rules.
